

Meeks barely beat his mates to the clubhouse, for Montag hoisted his tall fly a moment later.

Montag had expired on third in the eighth after walking and moving around on a sacrifice and an infield out.

Hy Cohen, no relation to manager Andy Cohen, picked up his first success of the year, with the aid of the relief lift by Witt and Kildoo.

The Pels shot the Cohens into a 2-0 lead in the first as Andy Bratkowitz took the first step toward his sixth defeat in nine decisions.

Al Grunwald's mammoth triple atop the 400-foot center bank delivered Dick Barone and Gail Henley, aboard via a walk and a single.

Montag's first homer since May 27 put the Crackers back in business in the first. Daniels' single and Meeks' walk preceded the drive into the right-field signs. DiPrima also doubled in the first, but the Crackers, notorious for leaving men on, left him at second.

Jim Rice walked, swiped second and came across on Cohen's single in the Pel second for a 3-3 deadlock. But the Crackers nosed ahead in the third when Montag tripled off the right-center sign and crossed on Riddle's single to
