

first paragraph this morning (June 26) when you give Del Baker credit for saying, in other words, 'The goal of life is death.' "—William J. Seas, 633 Moreland Ave., SE. . . . "When New Orleans was here, Manager Andy Cohen ran out to protest a play at second base one night. On the way back he stopped to talk with his pitcher. In the very same inning he came out to the pitcher again. Why wasn't he thrown out of the game like it happened to Clyde King in Mobile?"—George C. Bess, 845 Elgin St. SE To I. R. Chauncey Winder
