

HUT TWO! COHEN'S COMING

Ponce de Leon Park's third base patrons get their kicks counting cadence for Andy Cohen, genial New Orleans manager.

To the chorus of "hut, two, three," the spryly stepping Cohen marches to the third base coach's box at the start of each inning. He obediently follows their "halt" command, then does a left face and is ready for action.

Another Cohenism is walking in front of the catcher each time en route to the third base box.

Lefty Norm Chandler (1-0) was assigned by the Crackers to Corpus Christi of the Class B Big State League. Chandler, recently separated from the Army, posted a 10-3 record at Fort Lauderdale in 1953.

NICK KOBACK, Pittsburgh's $30,000 bonus catcher, made his

New Orleans debut Tuesday night. After the required "bench duty" in Pittsburgh he was assigned to Hollywood and subsequently to the Pels. . . . The first pitcher Andy Cohen faced in professional baseball was Jim Lindsey, later to become a standout hurler for the Crackers' 1935 pennant team. . . . Cohen had Cracker pitcher Andy Bratkowitz on his staff at Eau Claire in 1950.

PELICAN CATCHER Joe Erautt said Monday night's game was the first time he could remember in four seasons in this league that at least one ball was not hit off the right field signs at Poncey. . . . Bob Anderton, ex-Pelican pitcher now stationed at Fort McPherson, pitched batting practice for Cohen's club Tuesday night. . . . Jack Daniels' first-inning single was the 260th Atlanta hit of the year and the eight men left on base ran the Cracker total to 200 for the season. . . . The Cracker bullpen staff stood by the scoreboard's neon lights to keep warm. . . . That mound confab between Managers Clyde King and Cohen and Umpire Bob Ross Monday night dealt with two "rubbers" on the mound. They've been there for several years but Ross just discovered it Monday night. Rival pitchers have worked off the front "rubber" all the time with no squawks by either club. Cohen and King attempted to explain to Ross that nobody was complaining so "let's play ball." Scouts Spud Chandler (Kansas City) and Howie Haak (Pittsburgh) are watching the series. — CHRIS. TIAN,
