Lowrey Lone Neophyte in Southern;
Broke Hornsby's Record in 1952

Few baseball players enjoy the distinction of breaking a record set by Rogers Hornsby, but "Peanuts" Lowrey came through to eclipse one of the Hall of Famer's marks in 1952.

Playing for the St. Louis Cardinals, Lowrey delivered seven consecutive hits as a pinch hitter that season. Hornsby, also, was a Cardinal when he established the old mark of six in 1932.

Lowrey, known as "Peanuts" since an uncle saw him for the first time and remarked, "Why he's so small he's no bigger than a peanut," makes his managerial debut this season. He is successor to Andy Cohen at the New Orleans helm.

Lowrey, who signs his name "P-Nuts," is a stranger to the double-A Southern Assn., and one of seven new skippers in the circuit.

A 38-YEAR-OLD NATIVE of Los Angeles, Lowrey broke into organized baseball with Moline in 1937. Through Ponca City, St. Joseph, Tulsa and Los Angeles he worked his way toward the National League, finally arriving with the Chicago Cubs in 1942. But he dropped back to the minors after 27 games that season.

In 1943, however, he came back, again with the Cubs, and this time he was around for 12 years. He played six seasons as an infielder-outfielder for the Cubs before going to Cincinnati with Harry Walker for Hank Sauer and Frankie Baumholtz on June 15, 1949.

The next season St. Louis picked him up on waivers and he was a Cardinal until 1955, enjoying some of his most productive years in a Redbird uniform. His banner year was 1951 when he hit .303 in 114 games.

The Cardinals dropped him after the 1954 season and he hooked on with the Philadelphia Phillies for a year. Last-summer he was a coach at Buffalo.

He is the lone neophyte in the league, the other skippers having moved up from lower classifications and Cal Ermer, dean of the league, is back for his sixth season at Chattanooga.—CHRISTIAN.
