

Senators Set Pelican Series

The first definite games on the Austin Senators' spring schedule were announced Wednesday by clubowner Allen Russell.

Russell said that New Orleans of the Southern Association will come to Disch Field for a pair of two games series to be played in the afternoon. The dates for the clashes are March 24-25 and March 31-

April 1.

Russell and New Orleans general manager Vince Rizzo completed negotiations for the games Wednesday.

No other Austin games have been set although Russell indicated earlier that Oklahoma City, Shreveport, Waco, Victoria, Mont-errey and Fort Hood will probably be placed on the Senator schedule.

Manager Andy Cohen, who used to bring his Denver team to Austin for games, will head the New Orleans team. The Pels are to train in Huntsville, under Cohen, with other farm teams affiliated with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Some of New Orleans players who may visit here are names familiar to Austin fans of past Big State League days. Ken Barbao, Charles Beene, Lloyd Carden, Don Kildoo and Kenny Toothman, all former Waco stars, currently are on the New Orleans roster.

Russell said that the games have all been set for 2:30 p.m. The major league contests at Disch Field, the Giants vs. Cleveland, April 6, and Kansas City vs. Pittsburgh, April 4, will start at 2:30 p.m. also.

TEX'S TIPS

By TEX MAYHALL

According to authorities, the best months of the year for lunker blacks are January, February and March. As you know, the season was closed for many years during the so called spawning season of the black bass.

Personally, I have always leaned to the months of March, April and May for my good season. Even though the blacks are reputed to start spawning earlier, many are still in the process during these months and the remainder are guarding nests. And, too, it's not nearly so cold and uncomfortable when you get your hands wet from the line and throw a little spray in your face.
