

Andy Cohen could end up manager of year

New Orleans has gone goofy over the charge of the Pelicans. For all the early boos it is now cheers for roundy Andy Cohen, who has inspired this "wonder" Pelican club—a threat to take the Shaughnessy playoffs.

There will be a solid vote for Andy as the manager of the year if he can keep his Pelicans hot. And who knows, maybe a shining new automobile.

Clay Bryant got his Mobile Bears hot late in 1955 and they swept through to the Dixie Series championship. And at the end of the rainbow for Clay was an automobile—a gift of the fans.

The Oregon Supreme Court, in upholding a state law prohibiting women wrestlers, stated: "The obvious wish that there should be at least one island of the seas of life reserved for man that would be impregnable to the assault of woman."

It wasn't all bad for Coach Red Sanders when he lost his prize back, Ronnie Knox. He at least got Ronnie's stepfather out of his hair.

The Sugar Bowlers should go on with their basketball tournament, lining up top teams from the SEC, Atlantic Coast, Southern and Southwest Conferences. . . . The first thing competitive sports is supposed to teach is never admit defeat.

Phil Rizzuto, who bows out in September at 38, may manage one of the Yankees' chain clubs in 1957. Phil would find out a year in the minors would help when he gets a call to manage in the majors.
