Richards might it, but he's go

This was Florida last March . . . Remember?

Stan Musial showing off a flat stomach, hoping, hoping life really began at 40 . . . Frank Howard, heralded as the new Ruth, simply asking a real shot with the Dodgers.

Andy Cohen, the old Crimson Tider, happy to be a major leaguer again, and, he added, a member of the Phils' rebuilding crusade . . . Bob Friend, lean but not hungry, saying it couldn't happen again, that he couldn't lose seven straight starting another season.

Bob Elliott, fresh in from the coast, admitting pleasant surprise with Kansas City pitching . . . Cookie Lavagetto thinking Washington power would overcome the soft underbelly of Senator defense.

MUSIAL

Cal Ermer labelling Pittsburgh with a big future winner: Joe Gibbon, the Mississippi lefthander . . . Jimmy Dykes whistling that the Detroit Tigers were conceding nothing to nobody.

Charlie Dressen saying something every day, one day that Chuck Cottier was his second baseman.

Al Lopez saying little, smiling big . . . Defense had licked the New York dragon in '59, he whispered, Chicago defense and added power could do it again.
