

Downtown Mall Dream Outlined For Association

By STEVE PETERS

William Kilgore, executive director of the Downtown Development Association, Thursday sketched a plan for turning Downtown El Paso into a pedestrian mall reminiscent of New Orleans' French Quarter.

In an address to the Beauty El Paso Association, he said he would like to see arches erected at strategic intersections, signs posted requiring traffic to slow to five miles per hour, and pedestrians having right-of-way whether in or out of crosswalks. Crosswalks, in fact, along with traffic lights, should be abolished.

The French Quarter has jaywalking laws but "if a policeman arrested anyone for jaywalking in the area he would probably be fired," he said.

The association met in the El Paso Public Library, with Andy Cohen presiding. Kilgore spoke after a short business meeting, beginning at 8 p.m., in which mention was made of an association sponsored planting project in the park on the corner of Piedras and Elm.

CAFES FEATURED

Kilgore said in spite of current ordinances to the contrary, his "dream" as he called it, featured cafes with outdoor tables, widening of sidewalks, and general remodeling of the insides and outsides of many stores.

"In Europe, they've made 'walking streets,'" he said. Remarking that 3 per cent of Downtown El Paso's retail business — on a dollar basis — is supplied by Mexican citizens, he seemed to allude to an international atmosphere.

Most downtown areas in the U.S. are in critical economic condition, he warned. They are full of empty storefronts. El Paso's Downtown however is in excellent condition economically. Income had risen every year, he could remember, except 1963, the year Bassett Center opened. But the following year it went up again.

He has looked at downtown malls in other cities, and while some were attractive, others provided a cold, sterile downtown. "Any improvements in Downtown El Paso must not make our visitors from Mexico or our customers in El Paso uncomfortable."

Streets, he said, had been designed for vehicular traffic when "the person in the auto is not worth a nickel" to the Downtown retail economy. Sidewalks are so narrow merchants have been sued for pedestrian accidents caused by crowding.

Discussing the problems of implementing such a plan, he conceded he did not think it likely. He wished to stir people's minds and hoped something would be accomplished within his lifetime. However he did not favor ordinances requiring property owners to beautify their buildings, terming them "unconstitutional."

Favoring voluntary participation, he regretted that much Downtown property is owned by recipients of trust funds who do not live in El Paso and have no interest in the City. Also, some property in Downtown El Paso would be to the University of Texas system is tax exempt and the system is prohibited by law from using its income for anything but the University system.

He said one of the problems of adequate traffic regulation is streets were arranged when problems were less complex. "San Antonio was the road to San Antonio, Santa Fe the road to Santa Fe, and San Francisco went to California."

Joining the Elementary Teachers of Spanish for lunch will be bilingual teachers, teachers of Intensive Language Development programs, members of the El Paso-County Educators de la Raza, and guests.

During the luncheon, a group of students from Austin High School under the direction of Mrs. Dolores Rodriguez will present a program of Mexican folk dances.

PEOPLE THINKING

"Now that we're on the eve of the El Paso Civic Center," he told the meeting, "how nice it would be if we could get people's thinking back to the idea that Downtown is for people."

He described El Paso Street as the "honky-tonk" section of the City, "almost a Chinese wall" between the Civic Center and Down town. But the merchants there will realize within a few years they have to beautify their property in order to stay in business, he predicted.

"We are making strides but the economic aspects will have a big effect," he concluded.

Asked his opinion of the possible effect of Urban Renewal on his proposals, he admitted indecision. "I've seen money for UR badly spent, seen properties left vacant for years. But in other places UR has done a great job."

Chances of the referendum passing, he believed, were slim.

What do doctors recommend for patients in pain?

Doctors all over the country dispense over 50,000,000 of these tablets to their patients each year.

There are many medications a physician or dentist can prescribe for pain. Some are narcotic, many are available only on prescription. But there is one pain reliever, available without prescription, doctors dispense again and again... Anacin.

Each year, doctors give over 50,000,000 Anacin tablets to their patients in pain. If doctors think enough about Anacin to dispense all these tablets, what better recommendation can you ask when you are in pain?

You see, Anacin contains more of the pain reliever doctors recommend more than any other leading tablet.

Headache and dental pain is relieved incredibly fast; minor pains of arthritis are dependably eased for hours; even the aches and pains of colds and flu respond to Anacin. So the tension and depression that can be caused by such pain will be relieved too. And millions take Anacin without stomach upset.

When you're in pain, why don't you follow the practice of so many doctors and take the tablet a doctor might give you in his own office. Take Anacin.
