youngest man on the roster at 19.

A veteran outfield which saw much service in Dudley Field last year will be back in familiar territory. Don Wilkinson, Tom Silverio and Bobby Trevino will patrol the outer gardens.

Behind the plate are Dennis Paepke and John Olerud, both of whom have seen previous experience in El Paso, Paepke last season and Olerud in 1965.

Larry (Moose) Stubing returns as player-coach and is expected to platoon in the outfield as well as offer tremendous pinch-hitting power. Stubing is in his fourth year in an El Paso uniform, his second as player-coach.

Behind the scenes will be Pete Luther, who came to El Paso when the Angels first joined forces with Sun King operators and who has been the handy man with training room operations ever since.

Andy Cohen, former big league player and manager, returns as coach for the Kings in their Dudley Field appearances.

The shuffling and realignment of the Texas League itself is enough to offer fans a new look. Expanded to eight teams with addition of Memphis and Shreveport and return of San Antonio after a two-year absence along with the loss of Austin, has reshuffled the lineups.

Memphis brings the New York Mets into the fold of working agreements. San Antonio is owned by the Cubs, after Dallas-Fort Worth dropped the Chicago hookup in favor of the Houston Astros. The Atlanta Braves shifted their team from Austin to Shreveport. And when the Astros pulled out of Amarillo to move to Dallas-Fort Worth, the San Francisco Giants returned to Texas League affiliation by moving into Potter County Stadium.

The Giants pulled out of El Paso after the 1964 season, with the Angels taking their place in the list of working agreements.

Despite expansion to eight teams, the Texas League retained its 140 game schedule winding up on Labor Day and followed by an East-West play-off.

Sun King home games will begin at 7:30 p.m. except for Thursday's opening contest with the Albuquerque Dodgers, which will begin slightly later following pre-game ceremonies.

"We are going to offer the best baseball in the Southwest to our fans," Herschleder said. "Texas League baseball has many of the star major league players of the future and fans now can get a look at them on their way up. We feel it is the best entertainment that can be offered for the entire family."

Tanner was forced to delay final formation of his squad by the fact that Seattle, in the throes of becoming a major league club, took additional time to select its players. But he appeared pleased with his squad.

"We have excellent pitching and excellent defense," he said. "We may not have the sluggers that El Paso fans have had in previous years, but we have some real good power. If we can get some hits to back up our pitching, we are going to be right in the thick of the race."

And the word is "Play Ball."
