"GEORGE IS THE GREATEST." Michigan State's jolly Coach Duffy Daugherty used that term a half a dozen times during a clinic prior to the East-West football game.

George Webster

He was referring to his All-America rover back George Webster, who made him a prophet by nabbing the outstanding defensive player award while playing less than half the game.

"I took George and built my defense around him and I would say any new professional football team would be smart to do the same things," Duffy told some 400 coaches assembled for the Holiday Football Clinic in Palo Alto.

"He is 6 feet, 5 inches tall, weighs about 230 pounds and can move like a cat. He can cover our great end

Gene Washington, who can run the 100 in 9.6, for 80 yards if necessary.

"A team can draft a quarterback and it will take him four or five years to develop into a star. George will be a standout in his first season."

Another pro scout opinioned that Webster would be a solid pro performer for 10 to 15 years.

Duffy concluded: "Linebacker Chuck Thornhill can run the 100 in 9.9, our safety can do 9.7 and our cornerman 9.8. Of course, if he had to, George could beat them all."

WE MISSED ONE. In our column prior to the East-West game we listed all the players (we knew of and some we didn't) from the San Joaquin Valley who had participated in the Shrine classic.

We overlooked an outstanding participant and we are grateful to his mother for correcting the oversight.

Jimmy Johnson, who was a three-sport star at Fresno High School, went on to play three years at left halfback for Buck Shaw at Santa Clara University.

He was chosen co-captain of the 1941 West team and emerged as one of the standout performers, running 40 yards for the winning touchdown in a 20-14 thriller.

Johnson also was a captain in the field artillery and lost his life in an airplane accident on the last day of the war in Germany.

PEACE AT LAST AND IT'S WONDERFUL, say the nation's collegiate baseball coaches.

Pete Beiden, Fresno State College's veteran diamond boss, attended the five-day National Collegiate Baseball Association coaches' meetings in Houston last weekend and praised professional baseball's efforts in finally establishing a draft similar to that in football.

"It is a comfortable feeling to be able to recruit a freshman and know you are going to have him for four seasons," said Beiden. "I think the real good ones still will sign right out of high school. Also, if a boy goes to junior college and blossoms into a big star, he also probably will sign."

"We seldom get those boys anyway so I don't think it will hurt us any. For the boy who develops later, it will be a big help for us (college coaches). I can think back on a half a dozen boys in this category, who had they remained in school instead of signing, would have made a big difference in our teams."

Beiden said the rule is not retroactive and that anyone in school now who has been drafted still is eligible to sign.

The high point of Pete's trip was a tour of the Astro-dome.

TEXANS ARE PROUD PEOPLE and nothing makes them prouder in Houston than to talk about the "eighth wonder of the world."

In its first year of operation the fully air-conditioned indoor stadium attracted more spectators than the Paris Eiffel Tower, the New York Empire State Building and the Washington Smithsonian Institute combined — more than 4½ million.

It made more money on guided tours than the Washing-
