

Sport Thinks

From Page 1-B

ton Senators made on some of the lean baseball seasons before the transfer to Houston.

The Houston Astros were the first second-division team to draw 2,000,000 fans and club officials confidently predict that when they have a contender, it will be the first ever to attract 3,000,000.

Next year Lew Alcindor and his UCLA basketball mates are booked for a game with Houston University in the dome and already officials are predicting a crowd of upwards of 40,000.

That would more than double any crowd to ever watch a collegiate hoop battle in this country.

JOHNNY KEANE HAD BEEN scheduled as one of the Houston baseball clinic instructors over the weekend. It was a shock when he died Friday.

Gus Mancuso, Grady Hatton (current Houston manager), Andy Cohen, Johnny Temple and former St. Louis Cardinal pitching ace Howie Pollet comprised the clinic panel.

Beiden, who will take a sabbatical leave during this baseball season, said an attempt will be made to send an amateur baseball team to the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico.

It would not be a part of the Olympics, but rather would be a good-will tour against Mexican teams. The same thing was done in Japan in 1964 at the invitation of the Japanese.