

Kleinfeld Has His Night

Saul Kleinfeld, formerly of Passaic, was honored as the "Sportsman of the Year" in El Paso, Texas, last week. It was at the Mount Sinai's annual banquet.

Kleinfeld, known as the leading El Paso baseball, basketball, softball, bowling and golfing promoter, and noted for his contributions to the happiness and welfare of underprivileged groups, received an "Oscar."

Andy Cohen, former N.Y. Giant third baseman, and vice-president of the El Paso Sun Kings, a Texas League affiliate of the California Angels, was the master of ceremonies. He made the presentation, and Gene Autrey made the principal speech.
