When Allyn Thinks Of Championships He Wants Them For All His Clubs

By MAX GREENWALD
Star Sportswriter

SARASOTA, FLA. — On a clear day—you can see baseball championships.

That's the dreamy life of Arthur Allyn, owner of the Chicago White Sox, whose optimism about his club is well-known.

But when Allyn speaks of championships he means titles right down the line for all his farm clubs. He means a pennant for Indianapolis, too. And for Evansville, and for Lynchburg and for Appleton and for Deerfield Beach and for Sarasota.

When the millionaire owner of the Sox talks about his farm holdings, he speaks with almost evangelical fervor.

HE RESENTS baseball's "abysmal failure" in dealing with minor league franchises and wants to do something about it.

Almost $1,300,000 will be expended this year in behalf of Sox farms. Never before has so much been spent for one organization's minor league clubs.

"I have no objection to using this money if we are successful," Allyn said.

"We want better facilities and uniforms. We want to improve training techniques. We want to build up our minor league clubs and wind up having champions."

As for the White Sox themselves, Allyn says "anytime you don't win you're disappointed. Especially when you feel that had they performed to half of their capabilities, they would have won going away."

Allyn doesn't believe success or failure hinges on the manager and declined to put either Al Lopez, Sox pilot last year, or Eddie Stanky, the new skipper, on the spot.

A man of definite opinions, Allyn insists Milwaukee will have big league baseball—this year.

He prophesies that the runaway Braves will lose the legal fight in Milwaukee and will be held in contempt of court. Allyn thinks a fine as high as the astronomical sum of $100,000 a day could be assessed against the Braves, who then understandably could wind up in bankruptcy.

"The Braves and the National League are wrong," Allyn asserted. "This court suit would never have happened if the National League had told the Braves to stay in Milwaukee and forget about shifting franchises."

Allyn then compared this permissiveness with the action of his own league.

"THE AMERICAN League had the good sense to keep Charles O. Finley from doing this very same thing when he wanted to get out of Kansas City."

"Finley signed a contract to play in Louisville subject to American League approval. We refused. There just was no justification for the Athletics to leave Kansas City."

Allyn doesn't think much of the hometown court decision the Braves won in Atlanta.

He believes it will be up to a Federal district court, probably in New York, to decide which state's position is proper.

"Legal authorities tell me the Supreme Court is not likely to take jurisdiction," Allyn said.

Allyn's stand has made him highly unpopular in Georgia.

an 11-10 record and a 3.86 earned-run average with the Tribe last year. Gibson was 0-4 for the Tribe and 2-2 with Lynchburg in 1965. Shipley's biggest year was 1963 with the Tribe when he had a 15-7 mark. Last year he was 1-3 with El Paso.

He shrugs off this criticism and has pinned a clipping from an Atlanta newspaper on the wall of his office in the Sarasota Motor Hotel.

This article says "Allyn is a burr-headed, myopic, provincial charlatan."

HIT-AND-RUN—Andy Cohen, former Indianapolis manager, is baseball coach at Texas Western, whose basketball team is NCAA champion.

Jim Napier, who had signed as Evansville player-coach, is at home in Bakersfield, Calif., because of his wife's illness. Napier was Indianapolis catcher during the 1962-63-65-65 seasons. Al Lopez Jr., who didn't get very far as a shortstop in the White Sox organization in three seasons, has quit baseball. He is employed with the Internal Revenue Service in Florida. The Mets sent pitcher Galen Cisco to Jacksonville with the former Ohio State quarterback needing 50 days to be eligible for a five-year pension. A Sunday afternoon game at Bradenton between Kansas City and Washington drew only 598 in nice weather. Deacon Jones is on the White Sox farm camp list as a coach but expects to do some playing at Appleton. A great hitter, Jones was unable to continue as a first baseman with the White Sox and Indianapolis because of a "dead" throwing arm.

Indiana Central Rally Tops Miami Nine, 9-6

Central tied the game in the fourth, three of the runs coming across on a triple by Bob Maple. The Greyhounds put the game away in the fifth on five walks and two singles.

Two of the walks forced in runs. Miami (0-1) 130-000-020-A 9-1. Indiana Central 000-440-01x-9-7-0. Lenge, Stuart (5); Stoner (7); Bixler (8); and Bauman, Peterson (7); Cron, Swank (5); and Nicason, Terrell (9). Home run—Miami: Krintzline.
