Angels Club President Calls 'Em:

'Zombies in Fog'

United Press International

BALTIMORE—California's Angels play here against the Orioles again tonight, trying to lift themselves from the slump which has seen them drop eight of their last 10 outings.

The Angels lost another last night, this one by a 7-1 score to Baltimore.

Dave Johnson's grand slam homer in the fifth highlighted Baltimore's effort while Orioles pitcher Jim Hardin held the Angels to five hits and one walk while striking out eight.

TOM SATRIANO homered in the seventh for the Angels' only tally.

Angel general manager Fred Haney and farm director Roland Hemon were in New York today for the beginning of the free agent draft.

Club president Robert Reynolds worried loudly over his team's seeming lack of life.

"Zombies, we're playing like Zombies in a fog," Reynolds said.

"We look worse than we did last year at this time," he said, referring to when the Angels were last in the league, 12 games under .500. A 30-12 streak then put the club in contention where it stayed until the end of the season.

"I haven't seen any of that come-from-behind flair this year," Reynolds said.

Six-Game Win Streaks End—

Doublebill Loss Sun King Pattern

Special To The Herald-Post

AMARILLO, June 6. — The fates haven't been kind to the Sun Kings in their last two doubleheaders.

Arkansas stopped them twice at Dudley Field on May 20 after they had won six in a row.

And last night they were halted twice again after putting together a string of six wins, this time by Amarillo Giants, 8-1 and 7-1.

"We bounced back before and we can do it again," said Andy Cohen, who has been pinch hitting for Chuck Tanner as the Kings' manager during the absence of Tanner.

COHEN WILL end his managerial stint tonight, sending Joe Overton to the mound to face Amarillo. Tanner rejoins the club tomorrow in time to manage the Kings in the opening game of a series with Albuquerque starting tomorrow.

Cohen finds his club in a crippled state for tonight. Gordon Avery and Dennis Papke have foot injuries. And Tom Silverio, who was hit so hard on the knee cap by a pitch last night that it sounded like an explosion, is doubtful for tonight.

COHEN POINTED to some sunshine in the Kings double loss last night. The Albuquerque Dodgers, leaders of the Western Division race, were also struck down twice, by San Antonio. The Kings maintained their pace which is two and one-half games back of the Dodgers.

"It was one of those nights when we didn't have it and the other team did," said Cohen. "We didn't do well in the first game. Vern Geishert was outpitched by Hal Jeffcoat.

"IN THE SECOND game, Rudy May pitched a fine game and deserved a better fate. Our defense fell apart and we had a good many opportunities but failed to hit when hits were needed most. However, I don't want to take anything away from Bob Reynolds. He pitched good ball. He just came back from the service and evidently he must have worked out while he was doing military duty. He looked extra good.

"I thought we were going to win it when Bill Bethea on the second pitch of the game hit the ball over the left field wall. But that turned out to be our only run."

FOR THE MOST part, the top batters of the Kings were quite ineffective against both Jeffcoat and Ryenolds. Jarvis Tatum, Jim Spencer and Don Wilkinson went hitless in the two games.

Bethea, in eighth place in the batting order in the first game, hit a double and drove in the Kings' only run. Moved to the top of the order in the second game, he scored the only El Paso run on his homer.

Marty Perez and Jim DeNeff were the best hitters for average during the night. Each had four hits in six trips to the plate.

Gold-Line Golf Venture

THE DON WHITTINGTON — Jesse Whittenton-Lee Trevino partnership has been profitable from the start.

The two cousins had taken over the Horizon Hills Country Club. Trevino wasn't too happy with his pro job around Dallas. Don and Jesse brought him to El Paso, enabled him to get a Class A card in the PGA. It permitted him to go on the golfing tour.

It was Don's idea that he play on the PGA circuit.

The first tournament was a big one—the U.S. Open.

Trevino showned no stage fright at playing in such a prestigious event against the big name players.

He finished fifth, won $6000, took something like $29,000 in prize money for the year, was named "rookie of the year" for the PGA by practically everybody.

This year he's already won $54,426 and he's got six more months left in which to hit his goal of $100,000.

Whittington and Whittenton sponsored Trevino. They took a gamble and won.

Many of the young golfers going on tour don't have financial resources. They find themselves an angel or angels. Most of the time it takes years for these angels or sponsors to get their money back. Sometimes they never get it back. But Trevino has been a good investment.

Firms Bid for His Endorsement

TREVINO IS NOW a full partner in the Horizon club. Some of the profits he makes on the golf tour go back into the improvement of the course.

Don Whittington is his manager. "He tells me," Don said, "I'll do the playing, you take care of the money."

Don and Trevino have slated a meeting this weekend at Chattanooga, Tenn., with representatives of a factory which makes golf equipment. They may sign a contract in which Lee will endorse the company's products. For this he'll get certain benefits.

Trevino had a contract with the Royal Golf Equipment Co. He was furnished equipment, like clubs and balls, and paid some money. The contract expired on April 1.

Lee hasn't renewed it or signed with anyone else. Several other companies have offered to sign him. Two runner-up victories — in the Houston Tournament of Champions and the Atlanta Classic — have enhanced Lee's bargaining powers. Several are bidding for his services.

He's Knocking at the Title Door

TREVINO PASSED up the $100,000 "500" Festival Open at Indianapolis this week to practice for the U.S. Open which will be played in Rochester, N.Y., next week.

Don, Jesse and Lee have confidence that Lee will do very well in that tournament. Trevino's confidence, in fact, has been a key factor in Trevino's play on the tour. It was the guide line that helped persuade Don and Jesse to send him out on the tour.

Lee hasn't won a tournament yet. He may not win the Open next week. But he's getting right at the pearly gates of first prize money and he's almost certain to hit the jackpot sooner or later.

So far he has exceeded his and his partners' expectations.

Trevino used to give lessons at Horizon.

Whittington says this source of revenue has been cut off because Lee simply doesn't have time now to give lessons.

"If he was offered $500, would he find the time to give a lesson?" Don was asked.

"I just imagine he would," came the reply.

Injuries Won't Stop Iron-Man Former El Paso Catcher

Hundley Insists on Catching Even If Wife Has to Dress Him

Hundley Hit Homer That Broke Record

Randy Hundley hit 23 homers for the Sun Kings in 1963 and batted .325. He had the greater distinction of hitting the 193rd El Paso team homer of the season. It broke a 24-year-old Texas League record. The previous high for a team was 192. The Kings in 1963 went on to hit 207 homers. Hundley's record-beating homerun ball went over the left field fence and was close to the left foul line. In the same game, Larry (Moose) Stubing and Dick Dietz homered. A posed photo of Hundley standing at the plate and swinging and the simulated flight of the ball on team's 193rd homer was carried on the front cover of the Texas League record book of 1964.

RANDY HUNDLEY when he was the catcher for El Paso Sun Kings in 1963.

By ED SAINSBURY
UPI Sports Writer

CHICAGO, June 6. — Randy Hundley, the Chicago Cubs' catcher, is the modern day embodiment of one of baseball's oldest cliches.

"He came to play," the cliche goes, and Hundley makes it come true about as often as not. He's the iron man of the Cubs, and so far this season, he's missed only two of the 49 games. Last year he missed only 10 games.

HUNDLEY, shy about his personal accomplishments, dodges comment on his durability. But once this season he played in a game after his wife had to dress him to come to the park.

"For a while," he said, "I could hardly swing the bat, but the other guys kept yelling me 'you've got to catch. Don't worry about hitting.'"

Hundley, probably the National League's best defensive catcher, never has been a big hitter in the averages with a lifetime mark of .249. But he always has produced key hits, and his average this season has climbed from .204 to nearly .250 in the last month.

MORE IMPORTANT, in runs batted in, he ranks third on the Cubs, behind Ron Santo and Ernie Banks, and ahead of Billy Williams. "I guess I've knocked in some big runs," Hundley conceded.

Hundley, in his third year with the Cubs, represents one of the best trades the club ever made, sending Don Landrum and Lindy McDaniel to the San Francisco Giants for Hundley and Bill Hands, who has worked into the starting rotation.

Hundley became the Cubs' first string catcher immediately and has been so rugged that the club carries only one other catcher on the roster because manager Leo Durocher can't seem to get his starter out of the lineup. He won't go.

LAST YEAR Hundley set a major league record for fewest errors with only four during the season and set a National League mark with only four passed balls.

So long as he keeps up that kind of defensive work, his hitting won't be important. But he's trying to improve and accounted for his recent spurt by revealing a changed stance at the plate.

"I think I got out of my batting groove when I had the bad back," he said. "Then when it got better, I heard Pete Reiser telling somebody to open up his stance.

"So I tried it myself. I draw marks in the batting cage for my feet and I've been making pretty good contact since."

If it keeps up, and his wife can continue to get him dressed to go to the park on the days when he's hurt, he just might be the league's all star catcher.

Foli, who attends Notre Dame High School in Sherman Oaks, stands 5-11 and weighs 185 pounds and was called "a fine high school infielder with outstanding power" by Met General manager Johnny Murphy.

Worsley's Now Dallas Chap Guard

Willie Worsley, U.T. El Paso guard for three years and a member of the Miners team that won the NCAA championship in 1966, has signed a contract with the Dallas Chaparrels of the American Basketball Assn.

At 5-9, Worsley will be the smallest player on the Dallas team whose regular guards last season were 6-5 Charley Beasley and 6-3 Maurice McHartley. Worsley was picked because of his speed and his long-shooting ability. The Chaps believe he'll give them some three-pointers, which is the number of points given a long basket.

Hidden Ball Is Pulled On Julian Javier

United Press International

HOUSTON, June 6. — Julian Javier, the St. Louis Cardinal second baseman was the first victim of the hidden ball trick this season when Julio Gotay of the Astros pulled it on him in the seventh inning last night.

With the score tied 1-1, Javier singled and was sacrificed to second. With two out and Lou Brock at bat, Gotay conferred with pitcher Larry Diekrer and first baseman Rusty Staub.

Gotay walked back to his position and Staub, returned to first and then called Dierker off the mound to continue their conference. Gotay walked to second to hold Javier on and when Javier took his first step off the base, the embarrassed Cardinal was tagged out.

Dean Burk Does It—

Ho Hum! 4th TL No-Hitter

United Press International

Dean Burk of the San Antonio Missions pitched the Texas League's fourth no-hitter of the season in the nightcap of last nights doubleheader to give the Missions a doubleheader sweep of the Albuquerque Dodgers 2-1 and 1-0.

San Antonio, which collected only four hits, pushed across a run in the bottom of the fifth inning in the second game to give Burk all the margin he needed.

BEING PART of a doubleheader, the game went only seven innings, but it will still rate as a no-hitter for Burk. A San Antonio error allowed one Albuquerque batter to reach base.

The Missions pushed across a run in the bottom of the seventh in the first game to give the win to Pat Jacquez. Albuquerque's only run of the night was a home run by Henry Williams in the first inning of the first game.

ANOTHER brilliant game was pitched by Joe DiFabio of the Arkansas Travelers who held the Dallas-Fort Worth Spurs scoreless for 10 innings and finally won 3-0 when his teammates scored three times in the top of the 10th.
