United Fund Gives Tour Of Five Agencies To 'Loaned Executives'

A four hour bus ride for 10 of El Paso's top executives was a ride with tremendous impact this week.

Loaned executives to United Fund who are assisting with the 1966 campaign fund found out what five agencies do with the money they are annually allotted.

The men, with W. T. (Bill) Barnhouse, chairman of the group, leading the tour, met children at the Rehabilitation and Cerebral Palsy Center first. They heard from Miss Champe Phillips, executive director of the center, that 80 per cent of the agency's funds were derived from the annual United Fund drive. And, while they were there, they learned that the center serves all of the physically handicapped in El Paso, men, women and children, and is extremely important to every citizen in the area.

Second stop on the tour was the Lighthouse for the Blind, an interesting workshop where the loaned executives watched with amazement while blind workers caned chairs expertly, made brooms with a practiced hand and work with plastics.

The Memorial Park School for Mentally Retarded was the third stop for the men. Edith Zanker, executive director of the school, told the group that the children "love their school, unlike many of their sisters and brothers who are in public schools. They like to come to school and they don't really want to leave."

One teaching chore that the school takes up immediately with each child is acquainting each of them with their own phone number.

"It's amazing," Mrs. Zanker pointed out, "how many of them can't call home, or tell you how to call home because they simply don't know how. This is a simple fact that would never occur to most mothers and fathers because their children quickly learn their phone numbers."

The loaned executives watched the children, each with their own problem, as they happily worked at making Christmas wreaths and vases to hold flowers in the cemeteries. It was another sample of United Fund at work, helping children and adults to help themselves.

Next on the list of agencies was the Goodwill Industries where Bill Bingham conducted the tour. Busy workers throughout the agency sorted used clothing, worked with metal and repairing useable items for sale in the nearby Goodwill Store. One hundred men and women who would otherwise perhaps not be working were content in the knowledge that they were making their own way in the world.

Last agency to be visited was the Rescue Mission where transients are fed and clothed. The mission has facilities for 10 families at night and has a dormitory space to care for 70 single men. It serves an average of 300 meals a day. Supt. Glen Cuddeford, told the executives.

Executives touring the five agencies were Leo Westbrook, Dale Faulkner, Randolph Young, Bill Williams, L. H. Rudd, Harlan Hanson, Andy Cohen, Neil McKenzie, Art Downing and the chairman of the Loaned Executives Division, W.

SEEKS DAMAGES

Damages totaling $20,000 are sought by Lucy Castro in a personal injury suit brought Friday in 171st District Court against Walgreen, Inc., 200 N. Mesa. The plaintiff alleges she sustained painful and permanent injuries to her knees and internal derangement of her right knee when she slipped and fell in the store.

Only eight states have no sales taxes: Alaska, Delaware, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Oregon and Vermont.

It was an important four hours. It was four hours of time well-spent according to the touring group, time that "if everyone could spend, United Fund would go way over their goal each year."
