Ex-Marlins Are Future Of Phillies

CLEARWATER — So many former Marlins were encountered in the Philadelphia Phillies' camp that it seemed like old home week for your touring reporter.

Some of them have earned their spurs — like Ed Bouchee, hard-hitting first baseman, and Pitchers Jim Owens, Dick Farrell and Don Cardwell. Others are on the verge.

Most prominent in this group is Jim Coker, who caught for the Marlins in 1958. He had a great season under Manager Kerby Farrell at Buffalo last season and the talk around the Phillie camp is that right now he is Manager Eddie Sawyer's No. 1 catcher.

"If Coker doesn't keep the job, it'll be his own fault," one observer confided.

Coker, a former Clemson athlete, is determined to stick and explained that his improved hitting (.290) with Buffalo resulted from driving the ball more to right field.

These ex-Marlins and the other Phillies will have a hard time climbing out of the cellar, but there are several who will develop in the near future.

"Cardwell has got to become a great pitcher," said Alvin Dark, who came to the Phillies from the Chicago Cubs in the deal for Richie Ashburn. "He's got real stuff and a deceptive motion."

The Miami theme was continued during my chat with Dark. He called over a big, strapping youngster and introduced him as Jim Woods, who now makes his home in Miami.

"He's a fine young prospect," said Dark. Woods came to the Phillies in the Ashburn deal and is getting extra tutoring from Dark.

Herrera at Second Base

ANOTHER OF the more promising ex-Marlins is Frank (Pancho) Herrera, who delighted Miami Stadium fans with his fielding at first. He developed into quite a hitter with Buffalo last year, batting .329. Frank hit 37 homers and drove in 128 runs.

That is why Manager Sawyer assigned Coach Andy Cohen to work Herrera at second base. The Phillies consider Bouchee a fixture at first, but they would like to find a spot in the lineup for Herrera because of his potent bat.

"First base, second base, third base, it makes no difference to me," Herrera says. "All I want to do is play."

The Phillies also figure working at second may take some surplus weight off the big Cuban. He checked in weighing 230. How much does he have to lose? "Herrera's playing weight should be 205," answered Cohen.

Mason Prefers Bullpen

Henry Mason, who won only eight games in two years with Miami, developed into quite a fireman with the Bisons. He started only five times, but made 36 appearances in relief and wound up with the club's best pitching record, 12-3.

"I like relieving," said Mason. "You see more action that way."

Dallas Green, who had a 7-10 mark with Miami in 1958, earned another Phillie chance with his 9-5 record last year. Don Landrum, the outfielder, is here again.

Contentment at Third

ALONG WITH great baseball talent, Dark has a wry sense of humor. This was shown when I asked the veteran how many games he hopes to play.

"First, I'm going to try and make the team," said Dark. Barring injury, that is a cinch. Then Alvin would like to last year when he played in 136 games.

Dark, once a great shortstop, is happy with his third base assignment.

"You don't have to move around as much," Dark explained. "You can do more relaxing and you have more time on your throws."

Dark knows the Phillies can't go far, but he does insist they have some top flight players. He included Bouchee in this class along with Harry Anderson, who is getting batting tips from the great Paul Waner. Then there is Wally Post, a veteran outfielder.

They'll Go, Go, Go, Go

ATLANTA — (AP) — Two Atlanta brothers, both former stock car racing champions, say they will undertake a 30-day marathon car trip through 48 states and covering 25,000 miles.

"In five or six weeks we will take an American-made station wagon to Miami, our starting point," said Tim Flock Wednesday. "From the moment we start our ignition in Miami, we are not going to cut off the motor or stop for 30 days — that is, unless it is absolutely necessary."

WEST PALM BEACH — AP — The Kansas City Athletics hammered across seven runs in the seventh and eighth innings Wednesday for an 8-1 exhibition baseball victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Art Quirk, a southpaw, was charged with the defeat after he was thumped for four runs in the seventh on three hits, two walks, an error and a wild pitch. Art Kay gave up the three other Kansas City runs in the eighth.

Ned Garver, Bud Daley and Dick Hall collaborated in a seven-hit pitching performance for the winners. Jerry Lumpe of the A's got two hits and raised his spring batting average to .389.

The A's journey to Miami today to resume the series with Baltimore in a 1:30 contest at Miami Stadium.
