Carlson, New ABA Boss, Prefer Tennis, Soccer

NEW YORK — Four days ago, Robert S. Carlson, 47, was similar to most any other New York City attorney.
He worked 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at his 280 Park Ave. law office of Roth, Carlson, Kwi, Spangler and Goodell. He wore gray-striped suits with blue button

Thacher and Bartlett. Handled much of the legal work for Madison Square Garden and its various pro sports teams, which included the New York Knicks of the National Basketball Assn. Legal counsel for the New York Mets of the ABA. Member of the ABA's merger committee and special counsel to the ABA on various Paul Blair and Pete Reiser, a pair of outfielders who performed as Elmira Pioneers 24 years apart, head the 19-player 50th Anniversary Eastern League Elmira team selected by Twin Tiers fans as part of the celebration of the league's anniversary party Aug. 14 at Dunn Field.

Blair, EL bat champ with a .311 average as a 1963 Pioneer, led all players with 411 votes out of the 538 ballots cast and counted by Elmira co-owners Kip Horschburgh and Carl Fazio.
Reiser was runnerup in the balloting with 371. He was a standout in both 1939 and 1940 and had a two-season average of .341. Pistol Pete was hitting, 179 in July 1940 when he was called up by the then Brooklyn Dodgers.
Blair today is star centerfielder for the American League defending champion Baltimore Orioles; Reiser is a coach under Whitey Lockman with the Chicago Cubs.
Horschburgh and Fazio announced that many other ballots couldn't be counted because of flood damage. The flood also halted voting two weeks early but the Pioneers owners, who handled the balloting in cooperation with The Star-Gazette, said they were very happy over the response of Twin Tiers fans to the selection of the 50-season team.
"Elmira has a long and proud history in baseball," said Horschburgh. "We think the selection of this team is proof that Elmira takes its baseball seriously."
"I want to take this opportunity to say that all players selected to this 50-year team, plus the players and men put in Elmira's Hall of Fame are invited to take part in the Aug. ceremonies. We would like to hear from them if they plan to attend. We are sorry that we can't follow our original plan to pay expenses to bring these players to Elmira but recent developments have cut deeply into our budget.

"But we will welcome any and all who want to assist in making this night a tribute to remember."
Joining Blair and Reiser as 50-year outfielders are Jack Grossman, Johnny Mize and Johnny Rizzo.
Ed Robinson won the ballot at first base; George Fallon is the second baseman, Don Zimmer the shortstop, Packy Rogers is at third, Elmer Klumpp is the catcher, Lew Krausse won as right hand pitcher and Dave McNally as the lefty.
Utility infielders are Gerry Hannahoe and Walter (Rabbit) Maranville; Fred Kendall, the youngster on the team as a 1969 Pioneer, is the utility catcher; and Sal Maglie, Johnny Hividos, Ed Watt and Ted Pritchard round out the pitching staff.
Utility players selected were those next in line in total ballots received.
While Blair, Reiser, third baseman Rogers (315 votes) and southpaw pitcher McNally (298 votes) won their positions with ease, all others were ballot battles royal.
The shortstop and catcher spots were caught in traffic jams.
Zimmer, the 1961 whiz who took part in an all-time Elmira record 171 double plays, barely edged 1966 shortstop Mark Belanger and 1937-38 short fielder Ray White. Zimmer got 193 votes, Belanger 176 and White 166.
Voters had a tough time deciding on a catcher with five in close contention. Klumpp, who hit .338 and knocked home 98 runners for the 1936 Pioneers, got 161 votes while Kendall, .281 in 1969 and now catcher at San Diego, finished with 114. Otto (Dutch) Denning (1937) had 101, Johnny Pasek (1935) had 91 and Les Moss (1943) got 83.

Robinson, who hit .295 for the 1941 Pioneers and who today is General Manager of the Atlanta Braves, barely edged Hannahoe for first base, 239 to 219. Hannahoe, still an Elmira resident, had a combined .317 bat average for his 1935-36 seasons as a Pioneer.
Second base was close, too. Fallon, who played as a Pioneer from 1937 through 1939 then came back to manage the club in 1951-52, got 297 second base votes. Maranville, a one-year whiz here as player-manager in 1936, totaled 274 votes. Fallon had a three-year average of .279. Rabbit hit .323 and made the vest-pocket catch a byword in 1936.
Once past Blair and Reiser, the outfield ballot was close. Grossman won the third spot on the regular team with 241 votes. Jack had a four-season (1935-38) bat average of .329. Mize, .326 in 1932, got 236 votes while Rizzo, a whopping 343 combined average for two seasons (1933-34) made his utility spot by just five votes over 1939 EL bat champ (.336) and all-time Elmira doubles (49) hitter George Staller. Rizzo had 172 votes, Staller 167. Curt Motton, a 1964 Pioneer, was up there, too, with 151 votes.

While McNally, a 15-11 pitcher in 1962, had an easy victory among the classy southpaw field, Krausse had a scrap on his hands for the right hand spot.
Krausse, who was Elmira's all-time winner with 24-9 in 1936 and is Elmira's all-time winningest pitcher with a career record of 74-41, got 193 votes as compared to 184 for Maglie, a 20-15 pitcher for the 1941 Pioneers.
Hividos, the dandy little southpaw who won 45 games during his four-year stay (1937-49) was runnerup to McNally with 122 votes.
The other two pitchers barely squeezed in. Watt, the double no-hit kid of 1965, got 63 votes and Pritchard, who won 61 games for Elmira teams of 1926-29, got 59 votes.
Pitchers who just missed were Jack Kimball (57), Big Al Fisher (49), Sad Sam Zoldak (47) and Bill Gilvary (41).
Although fans did not vote for a manager, officials decided that Elmira's four pennant-winning skipper — Bruno Betzel (1937), Earl Weaver (1964), Darrell Johnson (1966) and Harry Malmberg (1971) — would serve as a roundtable of skippers.
