Surely you've heard of Adams State's powerful baseball team. No, not Arizona State. That school is in the Western Athletic Conference. Adams State. You know. That small college located in the Colorado mountains of Alamosa. Everybody has heard of the mighty Indians. Well, if you haven't been exposed to the Adams State Indians, it's about time the college with an enrollment of 2,500 be exposed to West Texas. Coach Louie Long brought his team to El Paso Tuesday with a 10-11 record and by the time Adams State finished with the University of Texas at El Paso, its record was on the winning side, 12-11. Yes, the Indians were on the war-path at Dudley Field and twice, the Miners under Coach Andy Cohen were scalped 1-0 and 6-2. "Their pitching was too good for us," said Cohen after UTEP was limited to three hits in the opener and only two runs in the second game. "We're capable of being a better team than we showed today," added Cohen. "We have to be to stay in the Western Athletic Conference.

"Heck, at one time, we had a string of 16 innings going back to the Arizona games where we hadn't scored a run." Adams State's only run in the first game was in the fifth inning. With one out, Fred Cook walked off Miner loser Jeff Hogan (3-3) and an out later, Dave Price doubled Cook home. The Miners had a golden opportunity to score in the third inning when Bob Alsup reached first on an error and Terry Goodro doubled him to third only to be stranded on the bases. Adams State hurler limited UTEP to three hits total.

Tuesday's second contest started out worse for the Miners. After the first inning when Adams State scored three runs, it was all over. Another trio of runs in the sixth knocked starter Mike Rima out of the box as UTEP trailed 6-0. Cohen's players finally scored their two runs in the fifth when Terry Dillingham singled to center and raced to third when the centerfielder let the ball get past him. After one out, Keith Dwinell walked and Steve Dau singled to left scoring Dillingham. Another walk to Joe Dehn loaded the bases and set the stage for Terry Goodro's sacrifice fly to left. UTEP completed its non-conference schedule and now has a 7-15 record. The Miners head back to WAC action Friday in Tempe against Arizona State who leads the Southern Division of the WAC with a 5-1 record. UTEP's record is reversed at 1-5. "I just hope these kids can pull themselves together so we'll look respectable for Arizona State," said Cohen.
