

Bisons Will Defer Appointing Coach To Succeed Lowrey

Appointment of a Bison baseball coach to succeed Peanuts Lowrey, signed Monday as manager of New Orleans, likely will be deferred until spring training, General Manager Dan Carnevale indicated today.

Lowrey, who served as coach to Manager Phil Cavarretta last season, still is Buffalo property. He received permission to negotiate for a manager's job on the promise that he would be released if he got a satisfactory offer.

Lowrey received a bonus to sign with the Bisons last season after he was made a free agent by the Philadelphia Phillies.

Lowrey succeeded Andy Cohen, another former Bison and infield star with the 1927 New York Giants, as manager at New Orleans, of the Class AA Southern Association. The club has a working agreement with the New York Yankees.

Third-baseman Bill Serena, utility-man Pete Castiglione, first-baseman Luke Easter, pitcher Karl Drews and catcher Pat Tomkinson are veterans who likely will be considered for the Bison coaching post.
