

COHEN IS OBJECT OF PHILLIES' JOKE

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies' Coach Andy Cohen, ejected from the Phillies-Pittsburgh game for protesting a double play call, was kidded all day long and took it good naturedly — until he reached the clubhouse.

There he found a telegram in his locker notifying him he had been fined $100 by the National League president.

Andy quickly recovered when some of the Phillies' players told him they had faked the wire. A first offender such as Cohen doesn't usually draw a fine.
