

Sacrifices, Bunts Pay For Miners

Coach Andy Cohen's U.T. El Paso Miner baseball team had found a way to move runners around the base paths.

It's called bunt and sacrifice.

The Miners used this formula in scoring a 5-4 comeback victory over Regis college of Denver yesterday at Dudley Field.

ERNIE HERNANDEZ opened the rally with a walk, followed by two bunts by Malcolm McClean and Joe Kuentler loading the bases. Barry Alburtus and Eloy Alvarado then broke it open with two long fly balls scoring two runs.

Phil Darwin collected his first mound victory of the year for the Miners and it brought their overall record to 10-19 for the season.

It also got them off to a good start when they open the WAC this Friday and Saturday with Arizona at Dudley Field.
