

Answering a few letters: Andy Cohen, manager of the New Orleans Pelicans, is from El Paso, Texas. He was a three-letter man at Alabama, doing baseball, football and basketball. Andy's toughest assignment, and one nobody could have carried out, was taking Rogers Hornsby's place in the New York Giant infield. Cohen got four hits his first day in the lineup. "Andy Cohen Clubs" sprung up all over New York, the most racially-conscious city. Andy has been in baseball ever since he left the campus, dabbling in wrestling promoting on the side.
