

Indians' Manager Due To Arrive In Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS (INS)—The Indianapolis Indians' new manager, Andy Cohen, was due to arrive in Indianapolis today.

One of the first orders of business set for the new Indianapolis baseball manager was to sit in on the contract signing of Coach Johnny Hutchings.

The popular Hutchings, long affiliated with the local club, was coach of last year's triple crown winners. It was the first time in the history of baseball in Indianapolis that the Indians won the American Association pennant, Association playoffs and the Junior World Series title in all one season.

The Indians training camp opens March 12 at Hollywood, Fla., when pitchers and catchers report. The balance of the team checks in at the training site March 17 and play their first exhibition game in the South on March 25.

The season opener will be on Tuesday night, April 16, against Minneapolis.
