KOKOMO (Ind.) TRIBUNE 13

Andy Cohen Visits Indianapolis

New Manager Knows His Way Around League

By ROBERT MOONEY

INDIANAPOLIS (INS) — Andy Cohen, once a heck-of-a good ball player and a former Army "top-kick", fully realizes he has a tough job to fill in replacing Kerby Farrell as manager of the Indianapolis Indians—but it doesn't scare him.

Cohen, fresh and tanned from some mid-winter activity in the Panama Canal Zone winter league, arrived in Indianapolis Thursday to get acquainted with his new surroundings.

Not entirely new, since the new manager met his old manager, Owen (Donie) Bush, president of the community-owned Indians, whom Cohen played under while Bush was running the Minneapolis ranch.

It was through the Chicago White Sox and Bush's co-operative efforts that landed Cohen in Indianapolis to succeed the very successful Farrell.

Realizing the success of Farrell, Cohen, unhesitatingly, said:

"I am extremely happy to be here. After all, I played in this league with Minneapolis for about nine years. Somebody has to be here. I appreciate the tribute since so many other managers wanted the job. No, it does not scare me. It creates a challenge. I am glad I was chosen for the job. They have to have some confidence in a man to pick him for the job."

Cohen, at the age of 49, is 5 feet, 9 inches tall and weighs 175 pounds.

Cohen, a former second sacker for the New York Giants, unfortunately is in the position of not knowing exactly what he has to work with.

Only two members of last year's Tribe, Ted Beard and George Spencer, as of now, are certain to be on the Indians roster. The rest of the old Indians, last year's pennant champions and Little World Series champs, are still in Cleveland's fold. It is possible that a few may wind up back in Indianapolis.

Other than Beard and Spencer, Cohen is only familiar with some of the White Sox talent at Minneapolis. This includes right handed pitchers, Al Papai and Charley Dufor, left hander Tom Flanagan, outfielder Jim Landis, and first sacker Jim Marshall, who is on the Sox roster and might make the grade.

Cohen is hoping the Sox will also let Indianapolis have Barney Lat-man, a 19-year-old pitcher, who in his second year of baseball last year had a 14-14 record at Memphis.

Cohen, who was a First Sergeant with the Army Engineers and made the invasion of North Africa, is affable, snappy, frank and has lots of experience in handling men. He said:

"We hope to have a respectable contender."

He has two jobs—to develop talent for the White Sox and satisfy Indianapolis fans. To succeed in one would be an accomplishment.

THIS IS NO "COME-ON" AD!
