

Mauch Likes Braves Power

BY FRANK FINCH

Milwaukee is having a frantic time of it catching up with Pittsburgh, yet the Braves are a better ball club, avers skipper Gene Mauch of the Phillies.

"If both teams played up to their full potential, I'd have to take Milwaukee, if for no other reason than the power they've got in their line-up," he said.

Asked to compare the Dodgers with the two top clubs, Mauch said, "Well, the last time I looked L.A. was six games back of Pittsburgh. But who am I to say that they can't make up that much ground? The Dodgers have lots of talent."

Other Teams Better

The Phillies have won only three of 13 games against the Braves and five of 14 from the Pirates. Before last night's fracas L.A. boasted only a 7-5 edge over them.

Walter O'Malley's personable son, Pete, is making a tour of the Dodgers' far-flung farm system. He already has visited St. Paul, Montreal and Orlando, and will take in Atlanta, Spokane, Great Falls and Green Bay before the summer ends.

The 22-year-old O'Malley, a dead ringer for his dad, has one more semester left at the University of Pennsylvania to complete his business administration course, and then will join the Dodger organization.

"I want to make baseball my career," he said. "I've just spent the greatest two weeks of my life studying the Dodgers' farm operation."

Strike-out Artists

With understandable pride, statistician Allan (Pythagoras) Ross points out that three of the National League's five flingers with more than 100 strike-outs are Dodgers.

The leaders are Don Drysdale, 156; Bob Friend, 117; Stan Williams, 110; Larry Jackson, 110, and Sandy Koufax, 101.

Drysdale & Co. is well on the way to breaking the major league record of 1,077 whiffs which L.A. established last season. The Dodgers have posted 630 Ks, in contrast to 570 in their first 86 games last season.

Roger Craig (3-1) drew the starting assignment for tonight's fracas with the Phillies. His opponent will be Dallas Green (1-3), who pitched a three-hit shutout against L.A. in his big league bow.

The Phillies' Bobby Gene Smith hit two balls over the screen to win the pre-game home-run contest. Ed Roebuck nabbed the fungo event and coach Andy Cohen of the Phils won the blindmen's wheelbarrow race. The egg-throwing contest finished in a mess.

Since they shifted into high gear, the Dodgers have won seven of their last 10 series and split the other three . . . Umpire Vinnie Smith's right hand was severely burned when a deep-fryer exploded in the kitchen of his Pittsburgh home . . . The Phillies don't expect pitcher Jack Meyer to rejoin them this year.
