

Rudolph 'Rapped' for Homers in Loss

By LESTER KOELLING

It almost goes without saying that when Denver and Indianapolis get together at Victory Field, some of the finest in baseball will be offered the patrons.

It's been that way ever since the Bears got into the American Association in 1955, and it is present again in the current series which continues at 7:45 tonight with Jim McDonald facing Ed Donnelly. Another fine performance between these two clubs resulted in a 2-0 Denver victory before 4,069 fans last night including league president Ed Doherty, and no one went home feeling they had been cheated for their entertainment dollar.

The highly entertaining evening got off to a grand start in the pregame presentation of the Vaughn Monroe revue, easily the best of the variety shows to be presented at Victory Field in the last several years.

Whether the Indians won or lost, one had to appreciate the sparkling defensive play by both clubs, and the brilliant pitching of Mark Freeman and Don Rudolph. The only difference between these two hurlers was the two fat pitches Rudolph served to Vern Rapp, who accounted for the game's only runs with his sixth and seventh homers of the year.

Few games could match this one for tenseness, thrills and excitement. Both clubs threatened frequently and both hurlers consistently bailed out of trouble. The Indians had at least one runner on base in every inning, but managed to get only one as far as third, as Freeman, winning his first game since May 27, stretched his scoreless pitching to 14 innings.

The slow and deliberate working right-hander became the first hurler to go the route for Denver on the current road trip and the victory was his fifth, all achieved in road engagements. He beat Indianapolis three times last year for a personal four-game streak over the Tribe.

FREEMAN'S "FINEST" SAYS COHEN

"That was the finest game he pitched all season," commented Denver Manager Andy Cohen, who as Tribe pilot last year had occasions to bemoan the success of the former Louisiana State University star, who once had planned a medical career.

Freeman's closest brush with disaster came in the sixth when John Callison and John Romano led off with hits. But he was helped out of trouble by some over-ambitious base-running by Callison, who tried to make it from first to third on Romano's short fly single in right. At that point, with the Indians trailing 2-0, it was a time for caution and not daring.

But the Indians have been schooled into trying for the extra base. Their speed permits such endeavor, and their lack of power demands it. Runs come hard for the Indians, who can't afford to be a "safety" club. They have to gamble on the base-lines, and sometimes they will lose.

Stan Roseboro, the new infielder obtained from Chattanooga, broke into the lineup at third base and deported himself well in the field, handling four chances. At the plate, he connected for two long drives that were caught, and walked twice.

Eddie Phillips, obtained from Louisville, continued in his slump by going hitless on four trips. He is now 0 for 15 with the Indians in addition to two hitless trips in his last game with Louisville. He came to the Indians with a .315 batting mark. Hale, on the other hand, has been hitting well at Louisville and last night clubbed two homers and drove in five runs in Louisville's second game 12-0 victory over St. Paul.

Demos, GOP in PAL Club Tilt Tonight

The annual baseball (?) game between the Democrats and Republicans will be held at 6:30 tonight at Victory Field.

Two other teams, the Indianapolis Indians and Denver Bears, will play a regulation baseball game as an anti-climax to this struggle between aging but determined athletic political warriors.

Proceeds of this second annual game will go to the PAL clubs. This police sponsored organization is conducting its annual drive for contributions.

Gate Open for Hockey Here, Denver

By Associated Press

DETROIT—The International Hockey League is holding up for 10 days some decisions about future operations.

The league, which has financial problems because some clubs ran in the red last season, held its annual board of governors meeting yesterday and recessed until June 27 without any decisions.

An application from Denver for league membership was tabled until then. IHL President Frank Gallagher said applications from other cities are to be investigated in the interim.

The IHL presently has five members. There were six in 1957, but Troy withdrew because of financial difficulties. Recently Indianapolis indicated it might also have to give up unless it gets a cut in rental costs.

It was assumed that the board of governors discussed
