

Indians' New Manager Possesses Fine Record

By BILL EGGERT

Andy Cohen, who always is wanted back wherever he has managed, is anxious to get the ball started as the new pilot for the Indianapolis Indians.

"I'd put him up against anyone I've ever seen in baseball," Frank Haraway, baseball for the Denver Post, said yesterday.

The 51-year-old Cohen managed the Denver Bears in the Western League, 1951-1954, picking off two pennants and two second places.

"He's the best handler of men I've seen," Haraway added, "and that's one place I would rate him above the best. His public relations is always fine and he gets along with the opposition on a friendly competitive basis. He has terrific knack of sensing a situation before it happens."

Cohen, who played second base for the New York Giants in 1926, 1928 and 1929 and spent nine seasons with the Minneapolis Millers in the American Association, will sign a one-year contract. His surprise appointment, announced yesterday by Tribe President Ownie Bush, dwindled 1956 manager Kerby Farrell's job opportunities to "a position in our organization" according to Cleveland General Manager Hank Greenberg.

It is dead certain that if Farrell, who had two pennants in three seasons with Indianapolis, doesn't land the Cleveland job he'll take over as pilot at San Diego in the Pacific Coast League. It is there where most of his 1956 Indianapolis talent that won the Little World Series will be playing.

COHEN, reached last night at his home in El Paso, Tex., said, "This is quite a challenge and a surprise and I'm cognizant of the fact that we need personnel to make any headway."

He said that had he known about the Indianapolis position he would not have taken on the managerial job this winter in the Pan American League. That season opens Dec. 5 but he hopes to spend a few days before that with Bush at the minor league convention in Jacksonville, Fla. There is a possibility he may be relieved of the Panamanian job to devote more pre-season time to the Indianapolis job.

His selection was mutually agreed upon by Bush and the Chicago White Sox, with whom the Tribe has a new working agreement.

Unknown to Cohen, his name was in the mill for several weeks but Indianapolis officials begged for time waiting for Farrell to make a move. After several time extensions, Farrell said early yesterday that he couldn't hold up the Indianapolis team any longer and that he preferred to take his chances with the Cleveland organization.

Cohen, never a sensational hitter, was a classy infielder. After his brief big league career, he spent nine seasons at Minneapolis, seven under Bush, who was managing.

After a three-year hitch in the Army, Cohen became part owner of the El Paso baseball club in 1945 and 1946. He was a scout for the Boston Braves in 1947 and managed Eau Claire in the Northern League 1948-1950 finishing third, first and second.

He then spent four successful seasons at Denver when the Bears set new minor league attendance records and for the past two seasons he directed New Orleans in the Southern Association to sixth and fifth place.

He and his wife, Barbara, have three children — Marina 8, Cathy 5, and a boy, Hank, 15 months old.

New York (AP)—The so-called second-year jinx didn't faze Cleveland's Herb Score. The sensational southpaw surpassed his brilliant rookie performance of last year by being named yesterday the American League's outstanding sophomore for 1956.

Score received 103 of the 207 votes cast by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in the annual Associated Press poll. Detroit Hurler Frank Lary ranked second in the balloting with 63 votes, followed by Pitcher Johnny Kucks of the New York Yankees with 32.

In 1955 Score won 16 games and set an American League record for rookies by striking out 245 batters. This past season he improved on both marks by registering 20 victories against nine losses, while compiling 263 strikeouts.
