

CHOICE OF Andy Cohen as new field manager of the Indianapolis Indians was a popular one in baseball circles.

Owne Bush, president of the community-owned club and Ray Johnston, general manager, spent last week attending the annual minor league meeting at Jacksonville, Fla.

"Everywhere we went during the convention we were congratulated on how fortunate Indianapolis was to have Andy Cohen as our new manager," the pair of executives said in a joint statement. "He was described as a great manager and one of the most popular anywhere."

They said that many of the convention-goers conceded Indianapolis a good chance to repeat its 1956 pennant victory.