

Field Busy With Sales Of Tickets

Four more players have signed their Indianapolis Indians baseball contracts, it was announced last night by Ray Johnston, the Tribe's general manager.

One of them, Pitcher Arnie Atkins, visited Victory Field in person to affix his signature. Atkins, who was with San Diego last year, stopped off at the ball park en route south. His home is in Muscatine, Iowa.

The right-handed hurler who netted a 13-6 pitching record last season was to leave early today for Tampa. He wants to work out at the Chicago White Sox camp before the Indians start training March 12 at Hollywood, Fla.

Others whose contracts were received yesterday included Pitchers Tony Pence and Willis Sperry and Catcher Sam Hairston.

Twenty-one of the 35 players expected to work out with the Indians at Hollywood have returned their signed contracts. Spring training doesn't get into full swing until March 17. Pitchers and catchers report five days earlier.

COACH JOHNNY Hutchings plans to leave Indianapolis March 8 for camp. Manager Andy Cohen and President Donie Bush already are in the south.

In addition to getting ready for the training details, Victory Field continues busy with ticket sales. It is expected the $40,000 mark might be attained this week. Tickets are on sale on the season plans—scaled from $16.25 to $85—and also for opening night. Every seat is reserved for the curtain-raiser but prices remain the same as they are for any other game—box seats, $1.70; first eight rows of the grandstand, $1.40; all other grandstand seats, $1.10.

They may be purchased over the counter at Victory Field or by mail.
