

NAU Miners' Toughest Foe This Season

Listen to Andy Cohen talk and one comes to the conclusion that his Texas-El Paso baseballers are now leaving their honeymoon cottage and preparing for a rough sea voyage.

The Miners have run up six straight victories, after dropping their first two games of the season, but Cohen believes his team will start into the meat of their schedule Friday and Saturday against Northern Arizona.

Friday's single affair at Dudley Field is scheduled for a 2:30 p.m. starting time while the double feature Saturday, at the same time, will get underway at 1:30 p.m.

The Miners made New Mexico State their sixth victim last Tuesday, winning 9-1 and continued their long string of innings without allowing an earned run.

The Miners pitching staff has not allowed an earned run in 32 innings although they have been nicked for seven runs during this period. Errors have enabled the opponents to plate runs which were not charged to the pitchers.

Cohen finally started a righthander against New Mexico State, Ron Peterson, who toiled seven innings, before being spelled. Peterson, used in relief on other occasions, was the first righthander Cohen had nominated to start a game.

Previously, Cohen has employed four lefthanders, Lynn Hunt, Marc Bombard, Harry Milner and Terry Witt, as his starting hurlers.

The Lumberjacks can expect some lefthanded throwing this weekend inasmuch as the Hunt-Bombard-Milner-Witt combo haven't seen action since the Texas Tech series last weekend.

Milner has won both of his starts with route-going performances, taming University of Albuquerque and Texas Tech. Hunt and Bombard, after shaky starts in their first outing, have evened their record at 1-1. Witt stands 1-0 in his only appearance.
