Quotes warmed over from the American Association All-Star game in Denver:

Andy Cohen, Denver manager — "We're coming into Minneapolis Wednesday night with the idea of regaining first place as soon as possible. Frank Gabler (14-2) will pitch against the Millers and Jim Pisoni, who has been out since May with a broken hand, will help our club with his return to center field. When we get all our cripples together, we'll be all right."

Ed Doherty, American Association president — "No club will run away from the league this year. The top clubs aren't quite so strong as in other years and the bottom clubs are better, which makes for a balanced race."

Roy Hamery, Phillies' general manager: "When we play Washington in Minneapolis, we will have our full club with us. The Phils were coming along strong until they blew that big lead to the Cubs the other day. Return of Ed Bouchee and addition of ex-Miller catcher Carl Sawatski has strengthened our club considerably."

Mel Jones, St. Paul president: "The American Association All-Star game will stay as long as it makes money, like drawing almost 16,000 fans in the rain at Denver."

Bill Bergesch, Omaha general manager — "I'm opposed to any all-star game such as the International league has where the all-stars play a major league team. Why promote the majors! Let's promote our own stars."

Hillman Lyons, Charleston general manager — "I've been called by the marine corps to Washington. I may be out of baseball and back in the marines."

Jerry Davie, Charleston's unbeaten pitcher (11-0) — "Never saw a club with so much will to win as the guys at Charleston."
