series with Minneapolis at Metropolitan stadium.

Q—What happened to Denver, Andy?

A—“We’ve been fighting injuries all year, and they finally caught up with us. Losing Zeke Bella’s hitting and Fritz Brickell at shortstop was too much.

Q—Is the club through,

as some managers have indicated?

A—“The boys haven’t quit; I haven’t quit.”

Q—Which clubs will finish in the playoff four?

A—“Well, it looks like Charleston has the pennant with an 8½-game lead, but who can predict the other three clubs between Minneapolis, Denver, Wichita and Omaha.”

Q—Is Bella through for the year?

A—“He’s one of the top hitters and he’s out the season with an injured Achilles tendon. We thought we might get Zeke back, but when he left Denver he had his foot in the cast again. Brickell is done with a broken leg.”

Q—Did the pitching level off?

A—“Lately, about the only pitcher doing well has been Joe McClain. Of course, Gabler finally won his 18th after several tries, but he hasn’t been doing so poorly. It’s been more that we haven’t been getting enough runs, and playing loosely behind him.”

Q—Will Windhorn win the AA batting title?

A—“He’s still up there, but Gordon hasn’t been hitting much lately either.”

Q—How about John Blanchard?

A—“He’s in there every day doing his best, but we just haven’t had the right combination lately what with all the injuries and everything else.”

Q—Who’s your pitcher tonight?

A—“John Gabler.”
