Denver played "give-away" with Minneapolis Thursday night, but the Millers refused to accept all the gifts and Denver took second place 6-3 at Metropolitan stadium before 2,616 persons.

Right-hander Frank Gabler of Denver recorded his 19th triumph and the Bears displaced the Millers by one percentage point in the American Association standings, dropping Minneapolis to third.

Denver whaled starter Bert Thiel, Tom Borland and loser Harry Dorish (3-2) for 14 hits, while Gabler checked the Millers with eight hits and one earned run.

THIEL GAVE up two runs in the first inning on Tom Carroll's leadoff homer and singles by Dick Sanders, John Blanchard and Gordon Windhorn before Borland took over.

Pumpsie Green's single, Paul Smith's bunt single and Art Schult's double to left scored Green. Smith was flagged at the plate.

CURT HARDAWAY'S double and Curt Roberts' single gave Denver a 3-1 edge in the fourth before the Millers came back with two in the last half for a 3-3 tie.

In the Miller fourth with two out, two errors by Hardaway and Ed Sadowski's single loaded the bases. Stu Locklin batted for Borland and hit a sinking liner to left field, which Windhorn somersaulted to catch and came up holding the ball in his bare right hand.

Umpire Dave Carabba ruled Windhorn did not make the catch and two runs scored on the single. Denver manager Andy Cohen and the Bears screamed in vain.

Denver unlocked the tie 4-3 in the fifth on singles by Blanchard, Windhorn and Jim Pisoni off Dorish with two out. A walk and another error by Hardaway presented another opportunity to the Millers in the last half, but Gabler retired the side.

AFTER THAT Gabler refused to give up the semblance of a run and the Bears added two more in the sixth from Dorish, Singles by Gabler, Carroll and Sanders scored one and the second scored from third base when Locklin caught George Wilson's foul fly in right and stumbled over the bullpen mound, allowing Carroll to score unmolested on the short fly.

Tom Hurd retired the last 11 Bears in order.
