

ON THE SIDELINES

Monday morning's wire news carried an announcement from Mel Ross, owner of the Indianapolis Chiefs who won this year's International League Hockey playoffs, that he was disbanding the team due to financial difficulties.

Simultaneously, in the morning mail we received a release from the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association that paid attendance at Victory Field through Sunday's double-header was 47,808 compared to 47,741 for the same number of dates in 1957. An average of only 2,066 fans per game for the community owned club. The announcement did not indicate financial distress; but the figures speak for themselves. At the conclusion of last season the club received in the neighborhood of $60,000 from its big league associate, the White Sox, who indicated then that the Indians would have to get on a self-supporting basis or go its way.

Management Trying

General Manager Roy Johnston promptly dismissed Andy Cohen, none-too-popular manager, and brought in one of the great names in baseball, Hall of Fame catcher

Walker Cooper, to handle the field reins in 1958. In our opinion Cooper is doing a splendid job with a ball club no one figured for better than sixth or seventh at the start of the year. A great hitter throughout his career, a fine catcher and a man who had caught some of the greatest pitchers of his era, Cooper has transformed the mound staff completely. He inherited probably the weakest pitching staff in the loop and today has one of the best. He has upped the batting average of catcher John Romano by 30 points, is guiding young rookie outfielder John Callison to an almost certain major league career, and has the Indians in a four-way fight for the first division. What more the Indianapolis fans can want before they support their ball club we don't know, but we strongly suspicion that if attendance doesn't improve quickly, this may also be the last season they have organized baseball in that community.

On The Homefront

Tom Spahr, Tipton's fiery-thatched 440 star returned Saturday from the senior class trip and indicated he would not take part in Tuesday's AAU meet at Fort Wayne. He felt that inability to get in any workouts during the week he was on the trip would be too much of a handicap to overcome.

Joe Tidler and Phil Peters, however, are definite starters and their efforts in the mile and the 880 respectively will mark their final appearance in the Blue and White colors of Tipton. Both are hoping to close out their careers by establishing new marks for their distances in the Blue Devil record book, and a fair sized contingent of fans is expected to make the late afternoon trip to Fort Wayne with them.

The meet will pit college runners and high schoolers in separate divisions, and a fine competition has been arranged.

Local Baseball

Shaky starts were encountered by several clubs in both Little League and Babe Ruth League openers, but the improvement as the second round of Little League play started was noticeable, and similar progress is certain to mark the play of Marsh's Liners who did everything wrong in their opener. Both leagues are uncovering some fine young players and fans who are out each night to watch the young men in action are well satisfied with the brand of ball they are seeing.

Eisenhower Congratulates Little Leagues

On the occasion of Little League Foundation Day, Saturday June 14, President Dwight D. Eisenhower has issued the following telegram to P. J. McGovern, President, Little League Baseball, Williamsport, Pennsylvania, for distribution to all League members.

"Little League baseball provides many opportunities to develop the principles of health, teamwork and fair play. At the beginning of the 1958 season it is a pleasure to send greetings to all 'Little Leaguers' everywhere and wish for them a happy period of participation in one of our great American sports."

Total attendance of parents and fans is expected to range close to three-quarters of a million persons in this country, with additional games to be played in Canada, Europe, Latin America and the Pacific Areas.

Here at Tipton Little League President Ed Neary announced that a program had been set up for Saturday evening, so as not to conflict with the regularly scheduled afternoon games in the Babe Ruth League, and that all contributions received at the game would be forwarded to Little League headquarters in Williamsport, for furtherance of its program.

Saturday's games will be those originally scheduled for Friday night and will pit the Deans against Perfect Circle, with Local 2754 playing the Pioneers. There will be no games Friday night.

Rain Halts Play

Pioneer Little League Manager Ullis Smith and his team were today bemoaning the rain which Monday night wiped out their game against the undefeated Elks after the also undefeated Pioneers had run up a 3-0 lead. The game was called on account of rain in the second inning by umpire Tim Renie, and may be replayed later. The second game would have paired the undefeated Local 3875 against the improving Deans.

ers should take advantage of golf pro Floyd Hamblen's free instruction courses every Thursday afternoon at one o'clock on the Tipton links. Only four youngsters showed up for the swing classes and instruction period last Thursday and there is room for many additional youngsters to gain valuable training. Hamblen will provide clubs for any of them to practice swinging.
