

Cohen, Wagner Arrive S for Boosters' Dinner

By BOB BEEBE

Sunday Tribune Staff Writer

A pair of old Millers got a running conversational start on the field for the 13th annual Baseball Boosters' dinner scheduled for 6:30 p. m. at the Pick - Nicollet hotel Monday.

Andy Cohen, picked as the old timer to be specially honored at the affair, and a 1937 teammate, Charlie Wagner, now assistant farm director of the Boston Red Sox, arrived Saturday night. They joined with Ed Doherty, president of the American Association who has been quartered here since speaking at the St. Paul dinner Wednesday night.

MILLER MANAGER Gene Mauch, Bill Skowron, Yankee slugger, and Jack Onslow, the old yard spinner, are scheduled to arrive today. Enos Slaughter, Houston manager, Bob Shaw, Chicago pitching star, and Rip Collins, old time St. Louis Cardinal star, will come in Monday. Shaw and Collins are appearing at a dinner in Chicago tonight.

Beebe

Halsey Hall, who has emceed all previous Boosters' dinners, likewise was due back from a Caribbean cruise over the weekend to handle his usual chore tomorrow night.

A feature of the dinner will be Mauch's receiving the American Association manager of year award for the second straight year. Doherty will do the honors.

MEANWHILE, the 1937 American Association season is expected to be well worked over in the pre-dinner gabfest by Cohen, Wagner and Slaughter.

All three had great seasons that year. Andy hit .320, and Wagner won 20 and lost 14. Slaughter led the league with a .382 batting average for Columbus, which won the pennant by one game over Toledo and by three over third-place Minneapolis.

More than 800 will attend the affair in the Nicollet ball room, the annual sellout having been announced Saturday. Doors will open at 6:15 p.m.