Phillies Await Arrival Of New Pilot Gene Mauch

Philadelphia Players, Front Office Shocked by Sawyer's Sudden Resignation

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The Philadelphia Phillies, still shaken by the surprise resignation of manager Eddie Sawyer, awaited the arrival of new skipper Gene Mauch today to take over as the third pilot of the club in three days.

Sawyer, the only two-time manager of the team in its 84-year history, resigned with startling suddenness yesterday. Coach Andy Cohen led the Phillies to a 10-inning 5-4 victory in last night's game with Milwaukee and the peppery Mauch was scheduled to reach Philadelphia from Florida today.

Real Shocker

The club's front office, beginning with president Bob Carpenter through general manager John Quinn and right down to the team itself insisted that Sawyer's decision was a bolt from the blue, a real shocker.

The Phils' general manager, who recommended Mauch for his managerial job at Atlanta, ticked off the reasons for his choice over pilots in the Phils' chain in the face of the new-comer's minor league record of a third place finish with Atlanta and second and third in two seasons at Minneapolis.

"He learned all phases of the game. He wants to do well—and he won't do it halfway. He has great ambition, desire and determination."

Quinn added, "more than I among baseball men share the opinion that he is one of the better young managers coming along in the game."

Eddie Stanky, now of the St. Louis Cardinals front office and who managed Mauch at one time, was a visitor at the park last night and concurred with Quinn.

The Phillies players echoed the surprise of Sawyer's sudden defection from the game he re-entered in July of 1958 as a successor to Mayor Smith. Most of the players shrugged and one after another, while admitting surprise, took refuge in the familiar, "that's baseball."

Pitcher Jim Owens, who drew a $600 fine from Sawyer for a taproom escapade during spring training and who quit the club in a huff only to return the same day, said, "I hate to see him go. He always treated me right."

"The other guy (Mauch) must be good, though, to get the job," Owens continued.

Wally Post, another of the regulars overlooked down South, said diplomatically that he hated to see "anyone leave baseball."

First baseman Ed Bouchee suggested, "when you're in last place, there's got to be a change."

Cohen, temporarily-in-charge pilot, quipped, "here I am, working 30 years to be a big league manager. I last one day. It must be some kind of record."

Across the way in the Milwaukee dugout, manager Charley Dressen admitted surprise and added, "but then I quit once too. Brooklyn wouldn't give me a three-year contract."

KETTLE, MONTANA GRAPPLING RIVALS

HOLYOKE — Big Don Kettle, 270 pound Iroquois Indian chief, has won two consecutive Valley Arena wrestling bouts.

Promoter Tony Santos, wasting little time, thereby signed Kettle to meet Chuck Montana, Detroit roughouser, in next Wednesday night's Arena 60 minute headliner, best two in three falls.

Kettle disposed of rugged Ivan Strogoff, Russian heavyweight, Wednesday night and Santos is convinced the Indian chief is ready for the top bracket heavyweights. There will be three other bouts.
