Villareal Atones Error With Triple

U.T.-El Paso gave away the second game of a doubleheader baseball bill to Texas Tech, but the Red Raiders didn't want it.

The Raiders, after winning the first game yesterday at Dudley Field 7-3, were just about out of chances in the second when, with two outs and behind 5-2, a grounder was hit to Miner third-baseman Glen Villareal.

Villareal, a freshman, took one look to the dugout after catching the ball and then made a wild throw to first to let the runner reach the bag safely. After a walk to a Red Raider, Cecil Norris blasted a three run homer to tie up the contest.

THE MINER third baseman turned from goat to hero in the bottom of the seventh as he tripled off the right field fence with two out and scored the winning run when Texas Tech's first baseman muffed a catch to allow Joe Pennies on.

"Villareal really made up for his error," said Miner coach Andy Cohen. "If he (Villareal) hadn't of taken so much time on the throw he would have had the runner out easily. But he tagged the ball well in the seventh and I might have sent him around for an inside-the-park home run if he had just been a bit faster.

"You also have to give a lot of credit to Pennies for hustling down the base path to make the first baseman miss the ball."

COHEN WAS pleased with the pitching performance of Ray Greggerson in the second game. Greggerson, who had not a mound decision in two starts, lasted until the rocky seventh.

"He was in command all of the way," Cohen said of Greggerson, "but he made just one bad pitch to Norris. Bob Downing looked good in both games in relief."

Downing (1-0) received credit for the mound win in the second game while the Miners' Larry Richardson was accorded the loss in the first contest.

The two teams play a

Judge Sets Hearing In NMSU Case

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A federal judge assumed jurisdiction of a court case involving the suspension of New Mexico State Basketball players John Williamson and Roland (Tree) Grant.

U.S. district court Judge Louis C. Bechtle said he would set a hearing in two weeks for arguments on certain "critical questions."

The players were suspended last January by the NCAA for allegedly receiving excessive financial aid. Their attorney, Richard Phillips, obtained an injunction against the NCAA, but later claimed that Williamson, of New Haven, Conn., the team's leading scorer, and Grant, of Philadelphia, still were not permitted to play. Phillips filed a contempt petition against the NCAA.

The contempt petition was heard by city court judge Herbert Levin and recessed until March 13.

The issues before Bechtle will include the NCAA motion to dissolve and vacate the preliminary injunction and claims by the players that they were denied due process of law and should be compensated for damages to their reputations.

The two were barred from playing after they were charged with receiving more money than they were entitled to under NCAA rules while working at a Las Cruces, N.M., bank. They said they needed the $110-a-week jobs to meet tuition payments.
