

Arizona Sweeps Series

Miners' Hogan, Knox Injured

By DERRY EADS

It was a bad weekend for U.T.-El Paso pitchers and things could get worse if Bob Knox and Jeff Hogan don't recover from injuries.

The University of Arizona swept a three game Western Athletic Conference Southern Division series from the Miners 3-0, 13-7 and 10-0. Arizona's victories gave it a 6-3 WAC mark while U.T.-El Paso stands at 2-7.

"Our pitchers have just faltered a bit," remarked U.T.-El Paso coach Andy Cohen. "They just didn't have the stuff against a good Arizona ball club."

BESIDES BEING shellshocked for 26 rounds and 38 hits in three games, the Miner mound staff may have lost the services of Hogan and Knox.

Hogan (4-1) suffered a concussion on the last play of Friday's game when he was hit in the head by a ball off the bat of Arizona's Jim Filipelli. Knox (3-1), who saw his record of 35 2-3 innings of not allowing an earned run scored go down the drain when Arizona pushed across two runs against him in the sixth inning of Saturday's first game of a doubleheader, was injured accidentally when Joe Kuenstler spiked the hurler's middle finger on his pitching hand.

"The doctor told Hogan not to pitch for a week," Cohen stated. "Knox' finger was very numb after the spiking and he couldn't get a good grip on the ball. I hope that both will be able to hurl in the Arizona State series this weekend (ASU leads the WAC southern division)."

"I WAS impressed with the pitching of Tony Eaton. It was by far the best he has done this year. He especially looked good in the first game Saturday in relief."

Cohen had some good news today when he announced that Barry Alburdis, who was thought to be finished for the year with a shoulder injury, might be ready for some hitting duties against ASU.

"Alburdis came out to practice Saturday and was suited up," said Cohen. "I might have used him in the Arizona series as a pinch hitter if it was a close situation. But since we weren't close at all I didn't want to risk him reinjuring the shoulder."

"We really miss Barry's bat. I believe that if Barry had been in the lineup the whole year our record (17-17) would have been better. He won that whole New Mexico series for us."
