

Knox Knocks At ASU Door

Bob Knox, whose string of innings of not allowing an earned run to score was interrupted last week, is out to start another tomorrow at 1 p.m. at Dudley Field when the U.T.-El Paso Miners host Arizona State University.

The two teams tangle again Saturday in a doubleheader starting at noon.

Knox was injured during his last outing when he was spiked in the middle finger of his pitching hand. He threw for a couple of more innings before being knocked out of the box.

"HE IS feeling pretty good now," remarked Miner coach Andy Cohen. "His finger has limbered up enough so that he can grip the ball."

The sophomore hurler from Chicago had good success against ASU two weeks ago when he pitched for over five scoreless innings against the defending Western Athletic Conference champions.

Arizona State, supporting a 43-5 overall and 9-0 WAC record, is the overwhelming pick to repeat as Southern Division champions. Sun Devil coach Jim Brock is expected to start his ace lefthander Eddie Bane (9-1) tomorrow.

"ARIZONA STATE is an interesting team," Cohen said. "In my book they are No. 1. They beat the defending NCAA champions, USC, three times this year. That shows how strong Arizona State really is."

"We have high hopes in winning at least one of the games."

Cohen said that Miner slugger Barry Alburdis, who has missed over half the season with a bad shoulder, may play in the ASU series.

"He came to workout for the first time this week since he reinjured it and we are hoping that it is well enough to permit him to play."

If Alburdis can swing the bat, Cohen may put him in the designated hitter position. Alburdis has slugged four home runs in 13 games and carries a batting average of .297. He was an honorable-mention selectee to the All-WAC Southern Division team last year.

ASU, which holds a 26-4 lifetime record against the Miners, should have a lineup of: Dennis Kendrick, lf, .366; Mike Kenneth, dh, .291; Gary Atwell, cf, .333; Dick Harris, rf, .331; Clay Westlake, lb, .338; Clint Myers, c, .326; Tom Sain, 3b, .342; Bump Willis, ss, .261; Bill Berger, 2b, .380 and Bane.

The Miners will probably start Malcolm McLean, cf, .234; Larry McKay, lf, .235; Mark Miller, 2b, .301; Joel Kuenstler, lb, .247; Glenn Villarreal, 3b, .254; Eloy Alvarado, rf, .258; Herb von Hagen, ss, .265; Bob Downing, dh, .137; Tim Peden, c, .217 and Knox, 3-0.

of-seven series four games to one.

AND PAUL SILAS, traded off to Boston last summer for rights to Charley Scott, dropped in two free throws with seven seconds left and pulled down a crucial rebound as the final buzzer sounded to give the Boston Celtics a 98-97 victory over the New York Knickerbockers in their Eastern Conference playoff game.

The Knicks lead the series three games to two, with the sixth game scheduled tomorrow night in New York.

Goodrich set a playoff record with 10 field goals in the third quarter as he helped lift Los Angeles from a 58-50 lead at the half to a commanding 100-83 advantage. Goodrich, the Lakers' leading scorer this season with a 23.9 average, had managed only 16 points a game against the Warriors in the previous four games.

Silas, a bear on the boards with 20 rebounds, dropped in his two foul shots after it seemed as if the Knicks had again surged from behind to win. The Knicks rallied from a 17-point deficit on Sunday to win in double overtime and they bounced back from a 13-point disadvantage last night to take the lead 97-96 with 16 seconds left on Bill Bradley's long jumpshot.

BUT SILAS HAULED down a rebound under the Boston basket and was fouled by Dave Debusschere as he attempted to shoot. He made two free throws and then snatched up a rebound of Willis Reed's desperation fallaway jumper at the final buzzer.
