

Andy Cohen now a coach of Diablos

Andy Cohen's intense love for baseball has once again brought him and brother Cid out of retirement.

The Cohens were signed Friday by the El Paso Diablos as instructional coaches. Andy is expected to handle first base coaching duties.

Last spring, Andy announced the end of a 16-year career at University of Texas at El Paso. Andy said Friday he was going to enjoy returning to baseball.

"It'll be fun working with these kids because most of them are the same age as my ballplayers at UTEP," Andy Cohen said.

In making the announcement, Diablo general manager Jim Paul said "These two men have more baseball knowledge than the rest of the Texas League together. They'll be an asset to the team."

Cid will be in the Diablo bullpen working with pitchers while Andy is expected to fill the first base coaching box, plus counseling the Diablos on hitting and fielding. Both men will be in uniform Saturday when the Diablos host Shreveport in the last of a five-game series at Dudley Field.
