

Miners' Pitching Good; Split Bill, Errors are Costly

LUBBOCK — Andy Cohen found out that good pitching can't do it all.

The veteran U.T.-El Paso coach has been counting on his mound staff to carry the Miners' baseball team in 1975.

George Landreth and Jeff Hogan tried to do just that in yesterday's doubleheader against Texas Tech. They permitted just one earned run in 21 innings, but the Miners were only able to get a split against the Red Raiders.

Texas Tech took the opener 1-0 in 10 innings and UTEP grabbed the nightcap 4-3 in 11 innings.

"THE ONLY earned run they scored," Cohen said, "came in that first game. Texas Tech had runners on first and third with two outs. The batter hit a swinging bunt down third base. Glenn Villareal fielded the ball cleanly and threw low to first base, but the first baseman couldn't hold on to the ball."

Roy Stringer drove in the Miners' winning run in the second game with a one-out single in the top of the 11th to plate Terry Dillingham.

"We have to improve our fielding," Cohen added. The Miners made six errors in the twinbill.

THE MINERS had a chance to win the opener when they loaded the bases with only one out in the 10th inning against Texas Tech starter Steve Runkel. Kim Hunter was brought in relief and he struck out the next two batters.

Art Bravo collected four hits, including two doubles, in the two games. He was 3-4 the second game. Joe Pennies was 2-9 for both games while Alan Morris was 2-5, with one double and one rbi, in the second game.

UTEP has a 6-3 season record.

The two teams were to play another doubleheader today, but Cohen reported freezing temperatures that might force cancellation.
