

Miners Play Best Game of Season, Still Lose to ASU

Special to The Herald-Post

TEMPE — Even U.T.-El Paso's "best game of the year" wasn't good enough to stop Arizona State.

Andy Cohen's Miner baseball team suffered its 10th straight Western Athletic Conference loss last night to ASU 9-2. The Miners will try to get in the win column today with a split doubleheader against the Sun Devils.

Roy Stringer started today's first game while left Ron Wrobel will start the nightcap for UTEP.

"IT WAS CLOSE," Cohen said of the disheartening loss. "We were right in the game until the eighth inning. It was one of our best games all year."

"(Jeff) Hogan pitched a beautiful game," Cohen added. "He pitched with his head, heart and arm. It is probably his best game ever. He tried a bit in the seventh."
