

Hogan Effort Is Rewarded

It's only justice that University of Texas at El Paso hurler Jeff Hogan strolled out of Dudley Field yesterday afternoon with a big 'W' strung from his belt.

Hogan stymied New Mexico's Lobos on seven scattered hits and an eighth inning run Friday but appeared a loser until two were gone in the bottom of the ninth and his mates rallied for a much-celebrated 2-1 triumph.

Still it was Hogan's bulldog effort in the top of the ninth that left Miner coach Andy Cohen beaming the brightest.

"JEFF pitched an outstanding game," Andy commented. "But in the ninth he was trailing 1-0 and we weren't doing anything against New Mexico's pitcher (southpaw Jim Weber). Jeff got into a jam and could have easily folded up his tent. But he really beared down, as if to say 'you may beat me but you're only gonna do it with one run' "

Hogan escaped UNM's ninth inning rally and after two were gone in the last of the frame, the Miners got down to business.

PINCH-HITTER Roy Stringer waved and missed at two Weber breaking pitches, fouled several serves off and then took a fastball downtown over the right-centerfield wall to knot the score at 1-all. Joe Pennies and Keith Rushing followed with doubles off the leftfield wall and Weber went looking for an analyst.

The win stopped a 15 game Miner losing skein in Western Athletic Conference play. The two teams wound up their seasons at 11 a.m. today with a twinbill at Dudley. The Miners were 16-26 entering today's final action.
