

The Miners' Fireball

LITTLE BETO BAUTISTA is going to develop into the most spectacular buzz bomb UTEP has had in basketball since Nate Archibald. He really can bring that ball down the court. Coach Haskins says he's not trying to bring his big boy, James Forbes (6-7 or 6-8?), along very fast. The good news is that Andy Cohen is mending fast. For one of the few times in his life, he was hit by illness. To the man at the Touchdown Club who was unaware of the name change and had been searching in vain for Lew Alcindor's name in the basketball boxes: Don't try to find Kareem Jabbar's name in the Milwaukee box score last night. He missed the game. He was hit by the flu bug. Quote in True Magazine's "Play For Kush and You Can Play For Anybody," written by David Wolf: "The Sun Devils have . . . been hampered by schedules that include the likes of San Jose State and Texas at El Paso." Not surprising from an Eastern writer who can't spell Camp Tontazona correctly. He might as well have said ASU was hampered by playing the other six teams in the Western Athletic Conference. Mary Huana says she doesn't like the idea of basketball officials watching the teams warm-up. Pretty soon, she says, they'll want to go into the dressing room and watch the players dress. Whatever happened to the college dunk, anyway? McMurry's basketball team last night had a Penny and a Nickels in the lineup. The Miners had more folding money. Woody Hayes of Ohio State made quite a spectacle of himself in the Bucks' game with Michigan.

GOT LOTS OF FIGHT LEFT

"Hay's in the barn,"

Is a football yarn,

But old Woody Hayes

On sideline strays

And gets into affrays.
