

THE FANNING MILL

by Frank Farrington

GREAT SOO league all-stars have tackled the Rox twice in the last two years and they are going to do it again Monday night at Municipal stadium.

In no instance thus far have the stars and the Rox failed to provide viewers with a bang-up ball game. In both instances the Rox have won, but not by dillying and dallying. They have had to bear down to squeeze out the decisions—which to me is a tipoff on the quality of amateur baseball played hereabouts.

I remember last year after the game Richie Klaus said he'd noticed a couple of young guys with the stars with whom he'd love to talk concerning pro possibilities. And Fred Martin undoubtedly will note aptitudes among this year's aggregation of Great Soo stars also.

The stars come up—at night of course—not only with good competition but they come up with a mixture of experience and youthful exuberance that gives the pros just about all they want in the way of opposition. And at least one of the Great Soo stars has had a fair amount of professional experience—Tommy Krebsbach of St. Joe's Saints. He played 92 games with Grand Forks in 1954 after a couple of prior seasons in D ball. Left fielder Dave Fritz of the Saints is considered a lively prospect who probably will be a regular on the University of Minnesota team in the spring. Joey Glatzmaier of Albany has shown tremendous talent with the State college team here as well as in Great Soo circles and there are many others of high type ability in this carefully selected group. Bob Essler of Sauk Centre, for example, is quite a hitter.

There was a rather noticeable note of satisfaction in the performance of both teams in last year's game here an expressions favorable toward a repetition were freely voiced.

The event, date, location and time have been noised about in the area and it is reasonable to expect a good-sized gathering for the occasion.

* * *

ANDY COHEN, former Eau Claire manager now coaching with the Philadelphia Phils, was ejected from the game Monday night with Pittsburgh . . . He found a telegram awaiting him in the dressing room notifying him he'd been fined $100 . . . Andy was surprised until he found out it was a gag perpetrated by the players . . . Eddie Yost of the Tigers has set a record for major league games played by a third baseman . . . He's passed his 1,865th . . . In his first time at bat as a big leaguer he struck out as a pinch hitter against Thornton Lee of the Chicago White Sox . . . That was in 1944 . . . Nowadays he occasionally bats against Don Lee of the Washington's Senators—who is the son of the first pitcher Yost ever faced in the majors . . . Hank Soar is a well-rounded sports personality . . . He played fullback in pro football, coached a team in pro basketball and has been an American league umpire since 1950 . . .