Maglie Still Doesn't Know Reason Bosox Let Him Go

MAGLIE . . . As '41 Pioneer

SAL . . . As '68 visitor

By AL MALLETTE

Sal Maglie is probably the best known of all ex-Elmira baseball pitchers.

For many reason, too.

The "Barber" from Niagara Falls hit the Elmira scene like a bombshell in 1941 and won 20 games, pitched an Elmira record (for starters) of 46 games, including playoffs; and is a charter member of Elmira's Hall of Fame.

On the national scene, Sal made headlines in 1946 when he jumped the New York Giants and headed, with teammate Danny Gardella, to the outlaw Mexican League.

Then he jumped back to the U.S. and started a fight for re-instatement into major league baseball. The fight took three years before Sal won and re-joined the Giants in 1950.

• • •

Sal made the same splash at the Polo Grounds in 1950 that he did at Dunn Field nine years earlier. He went 18-4 and two of the losses were by a run in 12 innings to Boston and in 13 innings to Cincy. During one span he won 11 in a row.

The next season Sal led the majors with 23 wins and was one of the big reasons Leo Durocher's Giants came back from a 13-game deficit in August to win the NL pennant.

Then there was the feud between Maglie and the Dodgers. This kept Sal's name in the news for years and was especially bandied about when Sal, one bright May morning in 1956, suddenly became one of those "hated" Dodgers.

That September, in the fading days of a glorious career, Maglie put it all together and tossed the only no-hitter of his career against the Philadelphia Phils, the Dodgers winning, 5-0.

• • •

The Maglie story continued in a tranquil manner for the next 11 years when, suddenly again, he was hot copy across the country.

He had been fired as pitching coach of the AL champion Boston Red Sox at a time when his work with the young Bosox staff was being lauded throughout baseball.

Sal, now 51 and recently hired as pitching instructor for the new Seattle team, was an Elmira visitor over the weekend and discussed the Boston situation plus many other highlights of his glamorous career.

Q—Have you ever heard the reason you were let go as Boston pitching coach?

A—To this day I haven't heard a reason on why. Williams (Manager Dick) never spoke to me about it prior, nor has he spoke to me since.

Sal Maglie checks progress of Pittsfield Red Sox with Manager Billy Gardner during chat at Mark Twain Hotel.

Everything was done through (GM) Dick O'Connell. He called me two days after the Series ended and simply told me Dick (Williams) wanted to make a change. No reason why, no word from Williams. Nothing. Just that Williams wanted to make a change.

I thought this was a bit strange and said so. That's what started the rhubarb. But I'd still like to know—and I'd like to hear it from Williams.

You'll recall that Williams later said I didn't work enough with the youngsters. That's a laugh because we didn't have any—except maybe Sparky Lyle. He was doing very good and you just don't change a pitcher who's doing good. Ken Brett came up late and we were battling for a pennant and didn't have too much time to work with him, I like working with youngsters, but actually the only time you can do this is in the spring, not in the heat of a pennant race.

Q—Did the Red Sox deal leave you bitter toward the club?

A—Heck no. Regardless of what some writers used to say in the old days about Maglie and Dodger grudges, I hold no grudges—not against the Boston club nor against Williams. There's no bitterness. My one and only complaint—if you can call it that—is that Williams himself never once had the courage to come to me personally and discuss the matter. Maybe this isn't too well known, but it's a fact that Williams seldom uttered a word to me throughout the entire last month of the season. I guess I knew something was coming but I expected to hear it from Williams himself, not through a mediator.

Q—The Bosox' championship in 1967 was described as a "Cinderella Story." You were on the scene. What were the big reasons behind the surprising Red Sox pennant?

A—Actually, there were three major reasons. First was the balance of the American League. I can't remember a season when teams were so well matched. The contenders, Detroit, Chicago, California and Minnesota, kept knocking off each other with regularity. Then don't forget we had tremendous success against the one team I thought we had to beat—Detroit.

And third was the big guy himself—Yastrzemski.

I've seen a lot of baseball in my 30 years on the scene but never have I seen one guy put everything together so well for such a fantastic season. That kid did everything for us. All that most fans remember is the triple crown of batting—which, I'll admit, is fantastic. But do you know that he made sensational catches all season to rob guys of big hits and save us runs; then, too, he threw out many a runner and cut down many a run with his deadly arm; and his base running! He did everything right.

Carl made the big play consistently—both at bat and in the field. When you get a season like that from one player, it's bound to infect the club just a little bit.

• • •

Q—How does this year's race look to you?

A—It looks just the way it stands now—Detroit and St. Louis. They've got well-balanced clubs and seem too far in front right now for anyone to catch. I'll admit I'm a bit disappointed in Minnesota and Chicago. I thought Minnesota would hit better. And I figured Chicago to stay up with pitching. But that 10-game losing streak at the start really hurt the White

Q—How about Boston?

A—I'd say they might finish fifth or sixth.

Q—You recently signed with the new Seattle club. What are your duties now?

A—Presently I'm involved in two jobs—instructing Newark, N.Y., pitchers and scouting Eastern League games. Later I'll take in some International and in September I'll probably look at several major league games.

Q—What type of pitchers did Seattle draft for its Newark entry into the New York-Penn League?

A—Let's put it this way. We have 13 pithcers at Newark—all young kids. Right now all I'm trying to do with them is develop coordination, windup, pitching motion and follow through. The latter, you know, is most important. It develops control. This might bring a laugh, but do you know some of these rookie pitchers never were taught how to toe the rubber in high school and college?

And all of them want to throw the slider. I try to make them forget that fast. My theory is to develop two pitches—the fastball and the curve. Once this is done then it's time to work on a changeup and fool around with other pitches. If they only realized that the slider has a tendency to put a "lazy" curve in their arsenal. This is not good for a young pitcher. He's got to have that good, quick curve. Any time you see a batter hit a pitch 400 feet, you can be pretty sure he's hit a slider.

I'm sincere. I have nothing against the slider, but a pitcher has to master so much more before he can even start developing a slider pitch. First, the pitcher has got to learn to pitch.

• • •

Q—What is the biggest problem as you see it in starting a new baseball organization such as the Seattle system?

A—The major problem is organization.

Drafting, recruiting, scouting are all essential, but the work really begins once the rookie signs the contract. Then it's up to the coaches to determine just where the boy is best suited to play.

For instance, maybe we've signed a pitcher with a great high school record who can hit, run and throw but can't quite cut the mustard as a pro pitcher. We make a change. Perhaps we've got a third baseman whose arm is not quite strong enough. He might be moved to second where his talents appear more suited.

The one thing everyone's looking for today is the diversified player—the guy who can handle two or three positions. That's the coming thing in baseball.

We'll work with these Newark kids throughout the summer, but it might be a few years before they see Seattle.

Q—Will you be with the Seattle club in 1969?

A—Very probably, although no one knows much about 1969 yet. Marv Milkes, the general manager, hasn't signed a field manager yet. That's the guy who has the final say, you know. But, yes, I expect to be with Seattle next year. Show me an expansion club which starts with the well-schooled pitcher.

Q—What is your opinion of today's low-run games and low batting average?

A—First, I'd have to agree with Don Drysdale's comment that hitters today are foolish—especially those little guys who know they can't hit the ball out of the park, yet challenge those fences with the long grip every time at bat. Batters don't want to meet the ball anymore, they want to mash it. This gives the pitcher a big advantage.

Another thing, today's pitcher is bigger, stronger, faster and is always well rested. He's instructed to throw as hard as he can for as long as he can, then if he weakens another guy, fresh and full of zip, is ready to come in and fire away.

Meanwhile, the every-day starter is more tired than he'll admit from night games (they kill bat averages), coast-to-coast travel, irregular eating and sleeping hours. All these take a little sharpness out of an individual and his reflexes might be just a shade off—a shade enough for the rested pitcher to overpower him.

If everybody rested those four days a pitcher gets, you wouldn't see as many shutouts.

• • •

Q—What do you remember about your 1941 days in Elmira?

A—Elmira was my stepping stone to the majors. I got the opportunity to pitch here and that's what I wanted. I was with Buffalo in 1938-39-40 and didn't get any chance to pitch because I was a young kid, Buffalo belonged to Detroit in those days. In early 1941 Detroit wanted me to go to Beaumont. I refused. Who wanted to go to the Texas League? Later Buffalo asked me if I'd like to go to Elmira. I agreed.

Jack Ogden (the Elmira owner), Manager Ray Brubaker and catcher Sam Holbrook were my greatest teachers. I learned about pitching in Elmira. Dunn Field was a great park to pitch in and Elmira was a great city to play in.

Brubaker really worked me that summer—me and (Tom) Pullig, that is. Heck I pitched a third of the games (46) that summer and Pullig must have worked 30 and Li'l ol' Ray Roche wound up with the best percentage.

• • •

Two games I vividly remember that summer. One was at Binghamton when I got the hit that ruined a no-hitter by Floyd Bevens. The other was that playoff when we beat Wilkes-Barre 1-0 after Red Embree had pitched 9 2-3 innings of no-hit ball, then lost it on Jess Pike's home run. That was a playoff game and we went on to sweep everything.

Elmira had a great season (Sal finished 20-15) and we had some great guys. I remember I always seemed to have runners on the bases when I'd pitch. Time and again (Andy) Cohen, (Alex) Monchak and (Frankie) Madura would gather around the mound and say to me: "Maglie, you'd better start bearing down on those batters because if we ever make an error, you're finished."

You know, those guys seldom made an error when I pitched.

3-Hitter Gives Pioneers Split

STAR-GAZETTE SPORTS

The hits long denied the Pioneers in the past eight days finally fell in the second game of a twin bill at Dunn Field Monday night as the locals rapped 10 safeties and pulled out a 4-1 win on Paul Campbell's nifty three-hitter.

Cal Ripken's crew lost the opener on Cub Scout night to the Pittsfield's Red Sox, 4-2, as Jim Palmer lost his second straight contest.

Tonight York moves into Dunn with the two teams going at it at 6 p.m. The exceptionally early start is due to the late start of the televised major league All-Sar game in Houston's Astrodome. Bob Patrylo (3-4) will go for the locals.

Chet Trail and John Mason broke hitting slumps in the second game as Trail gathered two singles and every Pioneer hit safely at least once off Pittsfield's Dick Baney and Raul Mercado.

• • •

The pair of games ended the long (five game days) doubleheader binge for the Pioneers.

Campbell's three-hitter was a sparkler. He yielded a first pitch double to Don Fazio which caromed off the wall in left and then retired the next 12 batters before walking Carm Fanzone as the Red Sox scored their only run in the fifth.

Bill Schlessinger followed Fanzone's walk with a single down the third-base line and Al Montreuil sacrificed both runners up a base. Pinchhitter Dick Russin then rapped a fly to center which Ted Parks caught, but Fanzone beat the throw to the plate.

The other Pittsfield hit off Campbell came as Fanzone led off the seventh with a single, but died there as the next three hitters went down before Campbell.

Elmira's second game runs were keyed for the second night by right-fielder Phil Mastagni.

Mastagni lined a shot to right to plate Ted Parks in the first and then hit a sacrifice fly to right in the third which brought home Dan Brady.

Royals' Rally Nips Newark

CORNING — A four-run rally in the seventh enabled the Corning Royals to register their second win in a row — and their fourth of the New York-Penn League season — by defeating Newark Monday night, 7-5.

Newark had taken a 5-3 lead at the end of five innings before Corning's bat broke loose. Paul Splittorf went the route for Corning, giving up only five hits and striking out 10.

Corning Golfer Qualifies for State Amateur

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Bill Galloway of Endicott fired a three-under-par 68 Monday to lead seven qualifiers from the Southern Tier into the State Amateur Golf Tournament next week.

Other qualifiers were Joel Griffing of Corning, John Govern of Binghamton, Jerry Dimmick of Binghamton, Gary Grayson of Binghamton, Charles Novitske of Johnson City, and Mike Carl Karl of Endicott.

At Jamestown, Dan O'Neill and Harold Carling, both of Jamestown, qualified. O'Neill carded a one-over-par 73 and Carling a four-over 76.

The tournament will be held July 23-27 at Yahnundasis in New Hartford, a suburb of Utica.

Bendix Ends A&P Win Skein at 25

The Ann Page softball team's dream of breaking the modern-day record for consecutive victories in the Industrial League was rudely shattered Monday night when an aroused Bendix team defeated Ann Page and ace pitcher Hank Margeit, 6-4.

The loss ended the Ann Page victory skein at 25 games, which equalled the modern Industrial League mark set in the early '50s by Remington Rand.

The big blow against Margeit was a base-clearing triple by Phil Humphreys in the second. Pete Palmeiri and Jack Brown had singled and Chris Devine reached first when his sacrifice bunt was bobbled, thus setting up the bases-loaded situation. Humphreys then scored on Carm Mustico's long sacrifice fly.

Ernie DeLaOsa clouted a 3-run homer for Ann Page in the 6th, when four runs crossed the plate, but it was not enough. Palmeri gave up only five hits for the winners and was tough in the clutch.

In other league games, Leo Makovitch hurled a 5-hitter to lead Moore over Westinghouse, 5-0; Thatcher blasted American Bridge, 18-7, and Remington Rand pounded American LaFrance, 20-8.

Thatcher's win was its fourth straight after four early-season losses. Bob Bradley and Rex Youmans had 3-run homers for Thatcher.

For Rand, Joe Gronowski hit a homer, and a double, driving in 4 runs, while Hal Ide also hit for the circuit. Jack Kent blasted two homers for American LaFrance.

Bobby Unser to Race at Glen

By ART RICHARDS

WATKINS GLEN — The great and the near-great of the racing world, including Bobby Unser, winner of the 1968 Indianapolis 500, will be here for the great racing days Saturday and Sunday.

Unser, 34, of Albuquerque, N. M., who has captured five 1968 USAC championship races, will run a Ferrari Dino sports car in the Six Hours of Endurance for the World Championship of Manufacturers Sunday afternoon on the Glen track.

Unser said in Denver that he would compete as a member of Luigi Chinetti's North American Racing Team of Greenwich, Conn. Chinetti's entry is a 2-liter, Group 6 prototype Ferrari.

His co-driver will be Charlie Kolb, 44, of Miami, Fla., a veteran of Ferrari sprint and endurance racing.

A new six-cylinder, double overhead cam, fuel-injected 2-liter motor and a new gearbox will be installed in the Chinetti Dino before it leaves Greenwich today for the Glen races.

For Sunday's classic Six Hours race, many familiar faces to Glen fans are in the lineup. They include Joakim Bonnier of Geneva, Switzerland, the first driver from abroad to ever race here; Josef Siffert, also from the Alps country; Jackie Ickx of Belgium, who won Sunday's French Grand Prix; Richard Attwood of England, and these Americans: Dr. Richard Thompson of Washington, D. C., Bob Tullius of Falls Church, Va., Bob Johnson of Columbus, Ohio, Don Yenko of Cannonsburg, Pa., Joe Buzzetta of Smithtown, N.Y., Roy Cuomo of Commack, N.Y., Bob Grossman of Nyack, N.Y., Sidney R. Finkel and Robert J. Nagel of Pittsburgh, Paul Richards of Wappingers Falls, N.Y., Dieter Oest of Philadelphia, Nick Davidson of Gulph Mills, Pa., Bill Brack of Toronto, Canada, and Art Riley of Franklin Square, N.Y.

Unser's entry in the Glen program has created a great deal of interest for he has competed against turbine-powered cars to win. Two turbines will be in the big race.

Thus far, 29 cars have been entered in Sunday's $20,000 event, which is the eighth of 10 races throughout the world counting toward the manufacturers' championship.

The weekend road race program opens Saturday afternoon with a 200-mile 87-lap U. S. Road Racing championship event, with $20,000 in prize money. Thus far in this first event, 22 drivers have registered, including Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., Skip Scott of Devon, Pa., Chuck Parson of Pebble Beach, Calif., Lothar Motschenbacher of Beverly Hills, Calif., Sam Posey of Sharon, Conn. and Bob Nagel of Bethel Park, Pa.

Donohue has won three U. S. Road Racing Drivers Series championships, and Skip Clark, two. Donohue has 27 points and Scott 24 in the previous six races this year.

France's Jo Schlesser, driver of a new Honda race car who was burned to death Sunday in the French Grand Prix at Rouen, was scheduled to race here this weekend. It was to have been Schlesser's first Glen appearance. He was to have driven a Factory Porsche.
