

Miners Win Again

Maybe Andy Did Give Springer Grandslam Sign

By PETE CICCARELLI

"Ageless Andy" came through with another of those managerial gems yesterday and Southern Colorado State University found out the hard way how "Sudden Death Dudley" Field got its nickname.

"I gave Roy the grandslam sign," a beaming Andy Cohen kidded after his Miners had erased a 5-0 deficit with a six-run eighth inning and stole away a 6-5 triumph. The win gave the Miners a 12-7 record going into today's 2 p.m. backpacker with SCU.

It was certainly easy for Cohen to kid after his streaking squad won its fourth in a row. Two SCU miscues had set the stage for rightfielder Roy Stringer's late-inning bases filled tater. Back-to-back infield errors in the eighth, the first of which had doubleplay engraved on it, put the Miners down 5-1 with the sacks packed. Stringer chose a 2-1 pitch to clout into a strong wind but the ball fought its way over the towering left field wall to knot the score.

GLENN VILLAREAL followed with a line single to center off starter and loser Gary Lown and then surprised even Mother Nature (the wind ceased) by swiping second. After David Nance drew a walk Herb Von Hagen singled Villareal home with the winner.

Righthander Tony Medellin, who hurled four and two-thirds innings of brilliant relief, picked up his fourth win in as many decisions. Miner starter Bob Knox suffered early streaks of wildness and was notched for all five Colorado runs.

Villareal, Von Hagen and Stringer each had two hits for the Orange while Russ Hargadine had two safeties for the visitors.
