

Profitable Ejections

HIGH AND INSIDE: Don Heffner, who managed the Cincinnati Reds for part of last season, ran the Globe-Miami team of the Arizona-Texas League in 1948. He reveals that he may be the only manager in baseball to make money from being thrown out of games. The scrappy little Heffner was tossed out of a number of games in the A-T that season and fined a total of $220. The club paid the fines, which may have been against the law, but it still paid them. At the end of the season, Riney Salmon, president of the league and a Phoenix attorney, remitted the fines to Heffner who endorsed the check and turned it back to Globe-Miami officials. They wouldn't accept the check. There's talk that Bruce Larson, Arizona basketball coach, will go elsewhere because the regents of Arizona and Arizona State have nixed any plans to build new basketball courts at those schools. And the honeymoon between Darrell Mudra, new Arizona football coach, and one sports editor, Abe Chanin of the Arizona Daily Star, was over before it started. Abe was so critical of the Wildcats in their spring game that Mudra visited the writer's home at 10 p.m. one day. The coach was informed that Chanin wasn't going to be a cheer-leader of the team. Andy Cohen will recall that Dutch Prather, home run hitter of some fame, played first base for him when the El Paso Texans were a member of the Mexican League in 1945. Dutch died at his home in Ada, Okla., last week at the age of 60. Sunland track photographer recently took a picture of Chuck Mattox, member of the park's board of directors. "All right, Mr. Mattox, don't move," the photographer said. "You don't know what you're saying," Chuck replied. He's president of El Paso Moving and Storage Co.
