Laidlaws in Season Box Seats 13 Years

By MAX NICHOLS

Box A-33, seats 7 and 8, will be filled opening day at Metropolitan stadium. That's as sure as three strikes and you're out.

J. H. Laidlaw and his wife, Mildred, have had season box seats for Miller baseball games since 1948, longer than any other fan. At old Nicollet park they were in box A-4.

They haven't missed an opening day of the Millers since the Franklin Roosevelt administration. This year will be no different.

"I like my sports professional," Laidlaw said as he talked over the coming season. "And to me professional baseball is the king of spectator sports. As long as we have pro baseball here, I'll be out there." Laidlaw makes sure his tickets are used for every game. He makes them available to employees at the Minnesota Farmers Mutual Insurance Co., of which he is president.

"I'll bet those seats weren't empty during over four games last season," he said.

Laidlaw, 54, has been going to Miller games since his high school days in the early 1920s at West. For many years he lived at 28th street and Dupont Av., not far from Nicollet park.

"My favorite ball player of all the days I have watched the Millers play was Andy Cohen," Laidlaw said. "He had color. He would get up there and pull at his uniform, and tug at his cap and poke away. He couldn't swing for sour apples, but he could really poke those hits."

Laidlaw said he feels the competition in baseball is better today than it has ever been. He loves the competitive atmosphere of professional sports.

"When they are playing for that dollar sign, you know they are really playing for something," he said. "I've seen tight games, scores up in the 20s, no-hitters, everything you can imagine. I've enjoyed them all. When professional football comes here I'll be right there with a season ticket too."

Jay and Mildred have three sons, Bob and Bill who work for him at Minnesota Farmers, and Tom who is in Carthage (Ill.) college. Mary, their only daughter, is in Coe college in Iowa.

"My wife is a good fan, too," he said. "We see every game we can together. Opening day is a special one for both of us."
