

'New Phils' Marching in on Stadium

A sort of affinity will exist at Metropolitan stadium the next four nights. The Indianapolis Indians, many of whom soon will be playing for Gene Mauch and the Phils, meet the Millers who used to play for Mauch.

Indianapolis switched from White Sox to Philadelphia affiliation this year. So you have such a definite prospect as Jim Woods, third baseman.

When Andy Cohen, Philly coach, was here for the baseball banquet last winter, he remarked:

"One of my jobs is to guess right on Woods. I hope I do. The kid has great potential. Right now our infield is scrambled a bit." Woods hit .290 last season with 20 home runs at Lancaster, Pa. He's only 20.

Ruben Amaro has a good glove at shortstop. At 24, he played with Buffalo in the International last year, batted .258. Larry Raines, of course, is one of the AA stalwarts of other years. He batted .284 at Toronto last season, had a .309 campaign with Indianapolis in 1956.

Chico Terry led Sally league shortstops in fielding and made the all-star team. He has led all his loops either in fielding or chances accepted.

Bart Dupon (6-3 and 200) had been a football, as well as baseball star. Last year he hit 20 homers at Asheville, N. C., in the Sally. In 1958 he slugged 40 four-baggers in the California league.

Most of the catching may be handled by Valmy Thomas. This is the young man from St. Croix of the Virgin Islands who was a Miller in the Giant regime. They liked him, wanted to keep him. Somebody said "he's a better catcher than Ray Katt."

The Giants pulled him up for a spell after he had caught about one game here. He was dealt to the Phils. Now he's hoping to play his way back.

Oh yes. The Hoosier pilot? Your old knight of popularity—giant John Hutchings.
